ATLANTAN FALTERS ON HOME NINE HOLES

Stages Thrilling Battle With Leader Going Out; Veterans Fall Behind.

By ALAN GOULD
(Associated Press Sports Editor.)

Interlachen Club, Minneapolis, Minn., July 11 (A.P.).—The Scots heard the wild call of the buzzard today instead of the sweet song of the birdie and as a result two young Americans named Smith and Jones fought a dazzling duel for the leadership at the half-way mark of the United States open golf championship.

In this homebred struggle, waged between swirling, perspiring galleries all the way, the strapping young blond professional, Horton Smith, outplayed the champion of the world, Bobby Jones, to take the lead in this classic of golf classics for the first time in his career.

Smith added a par-cracking 70, one of the two best rounds of the whole day, to his par 72 of the first round for a two-day 36-hole total of 142. Playing right behind, Jones started his second round with a one-stroke advantage, lost it on the first nine and emerged from a stiff battle with the hazards of Interlachen with a score of 73 and 36-hole total of 144.

Gallery Divides Attention.

Fully 10,000 spectators, scrambling around on a day that was well up in the 90-degrees region, but not so torrid as the [illegible]y before because of a cooling breeze, galloped back and forth as these two darlings of galleries, Smith and Jones, played out their rounds, five minutes apart.

The huge, shirt-sleeved crowds came away pretty well convinced that youth had the battle well in hand and that these two stars would fight it out tomorrow in the final 36 holes for the crown now worn by the great Georgian.

Smith, the 22-year-old Missourian who now represents the exclusive Cragston (N. Y.) Golf Club of the Metropolitan district, played the great Jones to a standstill in the first personal duel these two ever have had the chance to wage for the blue ribbon prize of American golf.

Has Skill and Confidence.

The tall blond from the corn country has been coming like the wind in the last few years, the youngest of the new crop of professional stars. He shot for the main goal today with a combination of skill and confidence that may make him a difficult youth for Jones or anyone else to catch tomorrow.

The two strokes' difference today between Smith and Jones represented the difference between the way they played the ordinarily easy 408-yard fifteenth hole. The young pro had a one-stroke edge at the time and got his par without special difficulty. A few moments later, Jones, on the same hole, hooked his tee shot wildly to the long grass in a spot where he

Calvin Coolidge

Says: Some foreign nations seem alarmed at our increases of duties on imports. Such alarm is not justified. On the whole the increases are moderate and generally intended only to equalize the difference between foreign and domestic costs of production. It ought to be remembered that following all the recent increases in tariff rates have come large increases in imports. The only exception was due apparently to the Spanish War, but a year later large increases began. For over a generation each protective tariff has changed the basis but enlarged the market for imports. Of course, some lines may have been injured and others compelled to come in on a rate more fair to United States standards of wages and living. This is not saying the new tariffs promoted or retarded the increases. But the fact is higher rates did not decrease the former imports. The most reasonable explanation seems to be that protection encouraged business and a more prosperous people bought more goods abroad. Instead of being disturbed at the tariff foreign nations should know that our general imports will be large so long as our business is good.

HOUSE FISCAL UNIT UPHELD BY SPEAKER

Telegram to Post Declares Committee on City Aid Will Be Fair.

FOUR FAVOR $9,000,000

In a telegram to The Post yesterday Nicholas Longworth, Speaker of the House, defended the select committee which he appointed earlier in the week to make an investigation and recommend how much the Federal Government should contribute toward support of the District government.

Critics have charged that the committee is "packed"; that four out of the seven members have publicly stated that a Federal contribution of $9,000,000 is either enough or too much, and that no single member of the committee has ever publicly taken an opposite stand.

In answer to these charges Speaker Longworth in a telegram from his home in Cincinnati, Ohio, said:

"The committee I have appointed to study the fiscal relations between the District and Federal governments was, in my opinion, the very best I could procure to serve.

"I did not examine the roll call and do not know how any of them voted.

"I have every confidence that the interests of both the District and the Government will receive the fairest sort of scrutiny at their hands."

Speaker Longworth appointed the committee pursuant to a resolution which was put through on the last day of the session by Representative Robert G. Simmons (Republican), Nebraska. A short time before this Mr. Simmons and other House conferees on the 1931 District appropriation bill had capitulated to Senate conferees, with the result that the Federal contribution was increased from $9,000,000 to $9,500,000.

The seven men whom Speaker Longworth appointed are Representatives Mapes (Republican), of Michigan; Holaday (Republican), of Illinois; Frear (Republican), of Wisconsin; Beers (Republican), of Pennsylvania; Crisp (Democrat), of Georgia; Collins (Democrat), of Mississippi, and Patman (Democrat), of Texas.

The committee is directed to meet here prior to the next session, conduct an investigation into fiscal relations between the national and local governments, and recommend an amount which Uncle Sam should contribute toward the city.

It is also directed to make a study of the taxation system here generally, and to recommend new taxes if it sees fit.

Representatives Holaday, Frear, Crisp and Collins already are on record as being opposed to any Federal contribution above $9,000,000. In fact, Mr. Holaday and Mr. Frear think that even that sum is too much.

U. S. URGES BRITAIN TO EASE APPLE BAN

Secretary Stimson Points Out Fly Pest Is Not Now Present in Virginia.

DAWES ALSO WILL ACT

(Associated Press.)

Modification by the British government of the recent ban on importations of certain classes of American apples because of the apple fruit fly is being sought by the State Department.

Secretary Stimson has discussed the embargo with the British Ambassador, Sir Ronald Lindsay, and has instructed Ambassador Dawes in London to take the question up directly with the British foreign office. The modification is being sought to alleviate "undue hardships" imposed by the embargo.

A statement by the department last night said it had been pointed out to the British government that no apple fruit fly infections were believed to have been found since the rigid inspection system was imposed last fall by the Department of Agriculture.

A special appeal was made for the exemption from the embargo of apples from the West Coast, it being pointed out that that area is not infested by the fly. In addition it was pointed out that the "C" grade for boxed apples requires exactly the same freedom from insect pests as the extra fancy or fancy.

"The hope was expressed, therefore, that his majesty's government will be willing in advance of the coming season to make such a modification of its recent order as will admit under certificate of inspection at all seasons of the year the recognized official grades of American apples above the unclassified and certified combinations of those grades," the statement said.

Baltimore Riot Squad Guards Dry Raiders

Baltimore, July 11 (A.P.).—A police riot squad was called out early today to protect Federal dry raiders from a threatening mob which gathered as they were raiding a saloon, arresting two men, and confiscating 112 barrels of beer.

The agents, Ival H. Hatton and Thomas W. Andrews, said they had started the raid and made the arrests when the crowd made threatening moves. They denied they had appealed for aid, declaring residents of the neighborhood must have called police headquarters. The police squad held back the crowd while the agents departed amid boos and catcalls.

PAPERS DENIED SENATORS; NEW CRISIS IN PACT

RESERVATION PLAN GAINING ADHERENTS

Two Weeks Debate, Then Appeal to Country, Is Proposed.

HALE SEES YIELDING OF DEFENSE BY U. S.

Talk Heard of Compelling Deferring of Ballot Until Fall.

By ALBERT W. FOX.

President Hoover's refusal to yield to the Senate in the matter of the London treaty secret documents has precipitated a crisis which jeopardizes all prospects of early ratification.

Immediately after receiving the President's reply, Senator Norris offered a reservation to the treaty which is entirely inacceptable to the protreaty forces and is characterized by Senators Allen and Reed as an affront to the President. But the reservation nevertheless gained immediate support from unexpected quarters and a definite move is now under way to force postponement of a vote on ratification until the fall.

Senator Norris announced he will oppose the treaty, without the reservation, and will help organize a movement against it. Senator La Follette will vote against the treaty if the reservation is not accepted. Senator Black will vote to postpone a vote until fall. Senator George will support the Norris reservation and likewise Senator Harris. Senator Thomas, of Oklahoma, outlined a program, which has already gained headway, and threatens to make certain a postponement of a vote until fall.

Would Debate Pact.

"As matters stand now I am against the treaty," said Senator Thomas. "I think the Senate is entitled to know as much as the President.

"The men who can debate this treaty should debate for two weeks. There should then be a postponement until fall, or after the congressional elections. This will give the people of the country an opportunity to understand the treaty and form their convictions concerning it. We can then come back and vote for or against ratification."

The plan to force a postponement, after about two weeks' debate, looms as a practical means of making the Senate's right to the secret data a major issue, according to opponents of the pact who obviously are gaining in numbers each day.

They have made an issue of the fact that they can not do their duty as senators without the secret information, and they are said to be ready at a selected moment to take the position that they will refrain from further participation in the debate proceedings until they get the secret information.

It is clear that if twenty or more stand on this constitutional ground, the Senate will be hopelessly shy of the necessary quorum to transact business. Senator Thomas expressed doubt over prospects of a quorum next week. There was delay and difficulty in obtaining the necessary 49 votes yesterday.

Message Is Delayed.

Reading of the President's message was delayed for more than an hour when Senator Reed sought to dissipate the effect of the opening detailed explanation of the naval treaty

GLOTH SWEARS OUT WARRANT IN BAKER CASE

STRONGER EVIDENCE HERALDED BY ACTION

CHIEF LINKS IN CHAIN ARE CIRCUMSTANTIAL

Man Had Access to Home Where Gun That Slew Girl Was Found.

Suspicion in the Mary E. Baker murder mystery is now firmly fastened on Herman H. Barrere, itinerant painter, for whom a murder warrant has been issued by Arlington County authorities.

This development has been shrouded in secrecy by detectives for 48 hours, it was learned by The Post last night. Issuance of the warrant charging that Barrere "did feloniously and maliciously slay and kill one Mary E. Baker" was made by Assistant Trial Justice Bryan Gordon, of Arlington County, upon the application of Commonwealth's Attorney William C. Gloth.

Heretofore investigators have preferred to refer to Barrere as "one who will have to do a lot of explaining." Mr. Gloth's action in procuring the warrant is believed to be predicated upon more conclusive evidence that Barrere has definite knowledge of the murder or that Barrere's "hideout" is known and his capture is imminent.

Long Conference Held.

In circulars sent to 12,500 points in this country the authorities mentioned that Barrere was wanted "for questioning in connection with the murder of Mary E. Baker." Mr. Gloth, Detective Sergt. John Flaherty, of the Washington Homicide Bureau, and a Department of Justice agent held a prolonged conference yesterday in Mr. Gloth's office.

It was announced following the meeting that the subject matter was Mr. Gloth's trip to Fredericksburg and Widewater, Va., where the suspect was reported to be staying.

All the evidence against the World War veteran is largely circumstantial, but Mr. Gloth believes that it is strong enough to bring him to trial for the murder. No evidence of a direct nature has been uncovered which would place him at the scene of the attack on the girl in the Ellipse, where the crime began which ended with the attempt to hide her body in a culvert near the Sheridan gate of the Arlington Cemetery.

Had Access to Home.

One of the strongest links against Barrere, Mr. Gloth believes, is the fact that he had access to the home of Herbert Campbell, Arlington County realty man, whence the murder weapon was stolen. This gun, which was recovered in the latter part of May in Mr. Campbell's real estate office, has been positively identified by ballistics experts as the gun used in the crime.

Further, Mr. Gloth points out, Barrere had access to the Campbell home on April 10, the day before the murder; articles stolen from Campbell's home on April 13 were found in Barrere's possession, and a pair of pigskin gloves, identified by Campbell as his property, was found with the murdered girl's garments in a trap sewer a half mile from the culvert.

YOUTH TELLS STORY WHEN POLICE ARRIVE

A mild, slender, 15-year-old boy, Henry Frederick Alt, will go before a coroner's jury at 11:30 o'clock this morning to face an inquest into the slaying of the man to whom he always tried to be a pal—his father.

Henry stabbed his father, John Alt, 55 years old, in the back with a carving knife yesterday morning at their home, 414 K street northwest. He had been driven almost crazy, the youngster told police, by the way his father treated his mother and sisters. And the last spark of love the lad held for his parent melted yesterday morning when the father threatened to kill his wife and chased her from the house with a pistol.

"I always thought there was some good in my father," Henry told police after the killing. He was calm under the strain, facing an inquisition in the office of Inspector William S. Shelby at the Detective Bureau at headquarters. "We had always been pals. He had never tried to hurt me, but I had seen him fire shots at my mother and my sister, Frieda. I felt sorry for him because I thought he couldn't help it. He was sick."

Always Kind to Son.

The father was a sick man, police were satisfied. Until two years ago he was a hard-working man, having built up a carpentry and jobbing business. Then, an ugly blot began to shadow his rationality; he became the victim of maniacal spells; he began to drink. His temper, at times, broke bounds, and these were the occasions when he threatened the lives of his wife and daughters, Freida and Elsie. But he never had a harsh word for his only son, Henry.

John Alt had not worked for almost a year, to be exact, since last August. He only drank and flew into violent temper, the broken-hearted mother told police. A bowed, gray-haired woman, a gentle old motherly soul, Mrs. Alt wept as she told her story to Inspector Shelby.

At 9:30 o'clock yesterday morning, John Alt went upstairs to his son's bedroom. He had been drinking for two days, police learned.

"Why don't you go out and get a job, or go to jail?" the father demanded.

Threatens to Kill Family.

Henry looked at him with steady, quiet eyes. The tranquillity of the son seemed to anger the father. For fifteen minutes he swore and reiterated the opinion that Henry should go to work. Henry merely gazed at him with unflinching eyes. He had always been a good son.

Then John Alt shattered his last shreds of reason. "I'll kill the whole —— lot of you," he shouted. Turning his back on Henry, he started for the room occupied by the mother and Elsie. Henry saw a pistol in his father's pocket.

Hearing the threats, Mrs. Alt and Elsie ran to the front door of the house. Henry caught his father at the door. Mother and daughter made their escape. Alt broke from the grasp of his son and dashed for the back door of the house. Henry darted

INTENSE HEAT KILLS 58 IN MIDDLE WEST

Unofficial Temperature of 112 Degrees Reported in Missouri Town.

HEAVY LIVE STOCK LOSS

Chicago, July 11 (A.P.).—An uncompromising sun beat down on the broad valley of the Mississippi again today and the latest of more than two score human sacrifices were claimed by the ancient idol.

The heat wave was blamed for 24 deaths in Missouri, 2 in Kansas, 3 in Nebraska, 10 in Minnesota and the Dakotas, 13 in Iowa and a half dozen others in Illinois.

The temperatures over the area remained around 100 degrees and there was little likelihood of relief before tomorrow night.

Two of the deaths attributed to the heat in Omaha were suicides of men who killed themselves rather than undergo another day of torturous temperatures.

The hottest unofficial temperature reported was in Sikeston, Mo., where readings were as high as 112. Other parts of Missouri reported 102 and thereabouts. In Omaha the reading was 100. Iowa farmers were experiencing a heavy loss in live stock, more than 1,000 horses having been claimed by rendering plants.

Parts of Illinois had temperatures ranging up to 105, but in Chicago a lake breeze kept the mercury down to below 80 and in Milwaukee it was only 79.

St. Louis, July 11.—A torrid heat wave continued its siege on St. Louis today and the death toll in the Metropolitan area for the last two days reached seventeen this afternoon as the mercury soared toward a new season's record. Twenty-three have died in the last week.

Roscoe Nunn, Government weather forecaster, said no relief was in sight for the next 48 hours.

In addition to deaths attributed directly to heat prostration, a 70-year-old woman, Mrs. Mary Rothery, died today of a broken neck she received last night when she fell from a window on which she had at-

SENATE INQUISITORS QUIET ON DRY LOBBY

Investigators May Report Following Elections on Activities of Wets.

CANNON LAST WITNESS

After filing blistering reports on every other subject—save Bishop James Cannon, jr.—which came within the asserted purview of its investigating powers the Senate lobby investigating committee has decided to keep hands off the highly controversial questions involved in the wet and dry lobbies, both of which were subjected to exhaustive inquiries.

Perhaps, next fall after the senatorial elections are over, it was suggested, the committee may get around to making reports on these phases of its work; but for the present none of the members in Washington is interested. Thus, until after the elections at least, the Nation will have to get along without the lobby committee's views on the assertion of F. Scott McBride that the Antisaloon League is "born of God" and operates by divine guidance; or the contention of President Henry H. Curran, of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, that five sovereign States and three out of four American citizens are in revolt against the dry laws.

Senator Blaine (Republican), Wisconsin, the only wet member of the committee, has gone home and is not expected to attend during the present special session of the Senate. The others, all dry, are in Washington, but are not interested in reporting on the wet and dry question at this time.

Chairman Caraway (Democrat), Arkansas, plans to make a comprehensive report on the entire investigation at the beginning of the regular session next December, but said frankly that he does not see any prospect of a partial report on the wet and dry activities before that time. Heretofore it has been the custom of the committee to make partial reports as the various phases of the investigation were concluded.

Mooney Witness Believed Located

Baltimore Police Holding Man Said to Be Waiter Wanted in Case.

Baltimore, Md., July 11 (A.P.).—A man believed to be John MacDonald, waiter, who has been the object of a Nation-wide search in the latest move to obtain freedom for Tom Mooney, in prison in California in connection with the bombing of the 1916 Preparedness Day parade, was held in jail here tonight. MacDonald was one of the principal State witnesses at the trial at which Mooney and Warren K. Billings were convicted of the bombing that cost ten lives and were sentenced to life imprisonment. MacDonald testified he had seen the two men place a suitcase near tht scene of the explosion.

Five years later, while working at Trenton, N. J., MacDonald signed a statement indicating that he was not positive of his identification of Mooney and Billings. The statement was given to the secretary-treasurer of the Chicago Federation of Labor and was used to aid in securing pardons for the men.

Gov. C. C. Young of California recently refused clemency to Mooney and Billings and a search for MacDonald was started.

Kansans Wire President Farm Board Chairman Insulted State.

Amarillo, Tex., July 11 (A.P.).—A demand from publishers of a Kansas newspaper for resignation of Alexander Legge as chairman of the Federal Farm Board, and outspoken opposition to any reduction of wheat acreage in the Texas Panhandle, today greeted Mr. Legge and Secretary of Agriculture Hyde as they continued their tour of the Southwest wheat belt.

Coupled with their demand for Mr. Legge's resignation, Max M. and Louis Levand, publishers of the Wichita, Kans., Beacon, asked for an apology from the Farm Board chairman for what they termed an "insult" to the people of Kansas.

Attic Lover, Slayer, Freed By Statute of Limitations

Charge of Manslaughter Outlawed After Three Years, Court Finds.

Los Angeles, July 11 (A.P.).—Otto Sanhuber, who as the "attic lover" of Mrs. Walburga Oesterreich, was convicted of the manslaughter eight years ago of her husband, Fred, wealthy manufacturer, was freed today.

The State concurred in a defense motion the statute of limitations had nullified the jury's verdict, returned a week ago.

The motion was presented as Sanhuber appeared in Superior Court for sentence. Defense said the statute of limitations outlawed manslaughter if no prosecution is made within three years. The State admitted this, and Judge Hardy freed Sanhuber.

Sanhuber was tried for murder, but the jury's verdict was "manslaughter."

after him. As he passed through the kitchen he picked up a carving knife.

At a shed leading into an alley at the rear of the house Henry caught up with his father and plunged the knife into his back. Henry then ran back to the house, and his father followed.

Another Sister Summoned.

The son went to the house next door, where his mother and younger sister had taken refuge. Mrs. Nena Troeger lives there, a good friend, who knew of the terror in which the Alt family lived. Once she had wrested a gun from Alt's grasp when he tried to shoot Mrs. Alt, police learned.

From this house, a telephone message was sent the sister, Freida, who is a bookkeeper at the Central Auto Works. Freida has figured in police history once before. Several months ago police used her as a "plant" at the auto works to capture two men who were accused of having plotted to steal the pay roll.

A plucky girl of 19, Freida went directly to her home. She found her father sitting in a front room. He stared at her with glazing eyes. Freida saw blood streaming from her father's back. Quickly she went to the phone and called Dr. George Baier, of 1326 Harvard street northwest, who had treated Alt for the past two years. He had recommended that Alt go to a sanitarium, it was learned.

Sees Pistol in Pocket.

As she was telephoning, Freida saw the edge of a revolver in her father's pocket. The fact that he was armed, combined with the peculiar look in his eyes, prompted her to leave the room promptly, she told police. But as she was starting to leave she caught a glimpse of the knife projecting from her father's back.

Calmly, she approached the dying man and drew the knife out. She went to the sink and washed the blood from the long blade, then placed the weapon in the sink and approached the door. The father struggled to his feet. Freida hurried out. As she hastened down the passage she heard the door slam.

Freida went next door, where her brother, mother and sister Elsie were gathered. She telephoned a friend on whom the family could always depend in time of trouble, Ben Denhorfer, of 1520 Monroe street northwest.

Door Found Locked.

A short while later, Freida and Denhorfer tried to enter the house. It was locked. Through the aid of some miraculous last strength, Alt had been able to lock himself from his family.

That was his last living act. Freida and Denhorfer entered the house through a window and found the bleeding body on the floor of a room on the second floor.

Dr. Baier arrived a short while later. He examined the body quickly and then found the survivors of John Alt in the neighbor's house. Huddled in a frightened group, they told the physician that the father had killed himself. Dr. Baier telephoned Coroner J. Ramsey Nevitt and told him that Alt had committed suicide, the coroner told a Post reporter.

The coroner informed the Sixth Precinct Station that he understood there had been a suicide. When Coroner Nevitt reached the Alt home and examined the body he discovered the true facts of the case.

Story Comes Out Bit by Bit.

But it was not until early afternoon that the tangled skeins of the sordid tragedy were made into a coherent pattern by Lieut. Edward Kelly and Inspector Shelby. The surviving members of the Alt family were closeted at headquarters for more than an hour. Piece by piece, the story of the tragedy was obtained from the son, the mother and the sisters.

Henry was taken to the receiving home, where he will be held until the inquest this morning. The body of the father was taken to the District morgue and will remain there until the outcome of the inquest.

Alt, until the break in his health, had been held in high esteem by his many friends and business associates. He came to Washington as a young man from Germany with his bride nearly 30 years ago. He was a member of the Washington Sangerbund Society, also known as the Concordia Society, and was a director of the German Orphan Asylum.

Coal Conference Still Deadlocked

Agreement on Any Issue Is Unreached as Yet Says Official Statement.

New York, July 11 (A.P.).—The conference of anthracite miners and operators, meeting in an effort to reach a new agreement to replace the one shortly to run out, issued a statement late today saying that agreement had not been reached thus far on any issue. The statement said:

"The discussion at today's session of the joint conference was of the possibility of a cooperating agency embodying fact-finding provisions during the tenure of agreement. The matter was discussed at great length. It was laid over for further consideration at a later date.

"The representatives of the operators and the mine workers both deplore the stories that have appeared in certain newspapers to the effect that settlement had been made of certain of the issues before the joint conference. They take this occasion to deny all such reports. All issues have been discussed frankly and freely, but no conclusion has been reached as yet in regard to any feature of these issues. When any such conclusion is reached it will be announced promptly through the official representative of the conference."

100 INDIANS INJURED BY BOMBAY'S POLICE

Nationalists' Attempts at Parade Broken Up With Whips and Staves.

SOME HURT SERIOUSLY

Bombay, India, July 11 (A.P.).—Four attempts by civil disobedience volunteers to form a procession forbidden by the police resulted in clashes today between the authorities and the volunteers, in the course of which nearly 100 nationalists were injured.

While most were only slightly hurt, the free hospital, operated by the Congress party, reported a number seriously wounded.

The procession was designed to be a sympathetic demonstration for the eighteen Gharwali soldiers who were court-martialed at Peshawar when they disobeyed orders during the recent troubles. Each attempt to form in line was broken up by the police, who charged the volunteers with staves.

Whips and Canes Used.

The troubles began when some 50 volunteers attempted to form a procession on the edge of the maiden esplanade, in a 12 acre irregular square in front of the Municipal Building. Police sergeants ordered their leader to disperse the crowd, but when he refused, the sergeants charged, using canes and rubber whips resembling black snakes.

A few minutes later 70 or 80 Sikhs marched into the center of the square. They, too, were charged by the sergeants and followed up by native police.

Some 30 Sikhs were injured. The rest squatted on the pavement and had to be carried bodily to the sidewalk, where they continued sitting on their haunches for more than three hours.

Further Attempts Halted.

At intervals of about an hour further attempts were made to form a line, but all were broken up by the police. Though the military force was held in reserve, it was not called into service.

Few women appeared, for Mr. Modi, president of the Bombay Congress committee, had requested women not to participate. He had also requested the volunteer marchers not to carry umbrellas so that they might be absolutely unarmed when attacked by the police. Mr. Modi himself was arretsed early in the afternoon.

The Congress party had an ample number of stretcher bearers and ambulances to convey the injured to the hospital. The stretcher bearers, who wore Red Cross bands, followed directly behind the police as these charged with their staves and picked up the injured as rapidly as they fell.

When the roll was called, 49 senators answered to their names.

Received a message from President Hoover in which he announced his refusal to turn over to the Senate the secret documents relating to the London naval treaty.

Senator Hale (Republican), Maine, denounced the treaty, contending that the United States had been "hog tied" by the pact.

Senator Reed (Republican), Pennsylvania, in reply to Senator Hale, declared, "If adequate national defense means mastery of the sea, then all conferences are useless."

Senator Norris (Republican), Nebraska, offered the first reservation to the treaty, a proposal that the treaty be ratified with the distinct understanding that "no agreement, secret or otherwise," existed outside the treaty and that no secret papers exist that would modify the terms of the treaty.

Senator Johnson (Republican), California, assailed the action of the President in refusing to submit the secret documents relating to the treaty.

JARDINE SELECTED AS FOREIGN ENVOY

LATER SHIFT IS SEEN

William M. Jardine, Secretary of Agriculture for four years of the Coolidge administration, has been selected by President Hoover to be Minister to Egypt, the White House announced yesterday. It is probable that the President will send Mr. Jardine's name to the Senate immediately after the special session acts on the London Naval Treaty. His confirmation seems assured.

About the State Department it was hinted that Mr. Jardine's appointment to Egypt might be but temporary. When other contemplated changes in the diplomatic representation abroad are brought about, there is a good chance, it is believed, that Mr. Jardine will be shifted to another capital.

Agreeable to Egypt.

The State Department has received advices from the Egyptian government that Mr. Jardine would be persona grata as the American Minister. If the Senate confirms the President's nomination, Mr. Jardine will succeed Franklin Mott Gunther, of Amherst, Va., who was named Minister to Egypt in 1928.

Mr. Jardine retired to private life March 4, 1929, when President Coolidge went out of office. He and his family have continued to live in Washington. For a while he was the executive head of the Federated Fruit and Vegetable Growers Association.

Recognized Agricultural Authority.

At the time President Coolidge appointed Mr. Jardine Secretary of Agriculture he was president of the Kansas State Agricultural College, and a recognized authority on agricultural matters. He is a native of Idaho, and was born 51 years ago.

Before Mr. Jardine's connection with the Kansas institution he was assistant to the chief of the department of agronomy at the Agricultural College of Utah. He also formerly was assistant United States cerealist in charge of dry land grain investigations.

Evelyn Laye Wins Divorce in London

Star's Former Spouse May Wed Miss Matthews, Corespondent.

London, July 11 (A.P.).—Evelyn Laye, actress wife of Robert Hale Monroe, known on the stage as "Sunny" Hale, today was granted a divorce on the ground of her husband's alleged misconduct, Jessie Matthews, an actress, was named as corespondent. Evelyn Laye is in Hollywood. Her deposition, taken last month, was read in court.

New York, July 11 (A.P.).—Evelyn Laye, granted a divorce today in London from "Sunny" Hale, and Jessie Matthews, named as corespondent, were rivals on Broadway last season. Miss Laye, a dainty blonde, was the star of "Bitter Sweet," and Miss Matthews, tall and striking brunette, was Jack Buchanan's leading woman in "Wake Up and Dream."

Just before they both came over for their New York engagements, Miss Laye filed her divorce action against "Sunny" Hale, naming Miss Matthews, who had been Hale's leading woman in the London production of "Wake Up and Dream." Hale remained in London. Friends of Miss Matthews said today that she intends to marry Hale as soon as the decree becomes final.

Envoy Warns Americans Against Chinese Bandits

(Associated Press.)

Constant danger to Americans at interior points in the Chinese provinces of Hunan, Hupen, Kiangsi and to a lesser extent in Honan was reported to the State Department yesterday by Consul General Frank P. Lockhart, at Hankow.

He said the districts were bandit ridden and that he has refused travel certificates to Americans who wish to go to points from which they could not be quickly and safely evacuated. The consul added the greatest danger was the possibility of capture of Americans by marauders seeking ransom. He plans to warn Americans in the four provinces.

Brief Tribute From Wife Marks Conan Doyle Burial

Dead Author Will Continue His Work in Behalf of Spiritualism, Note Read by Side of Coffin Strewn With Roses Says.

Windlesham, England, July 11 (A.P.).—A wife's tribute to her dead husband and an explanation of her family's attitude toward death constituted the funeral oration read today over the body of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle in the garden of his Sussex home, where many of his Sherlock Holmes tales were penned.

A blazing sun beat down upon the garden and on the deep red roses strewn over the coffin, and pelted the little group of mourners, who, in accordance with their spiritualistic belief, displayed no outward trappings of woe, while the Rev. Dr. C. Drayton Thomas stood by the grave and read Lady Doyle's testimony of affection and faith.

"Sir Arthur will continue his work for the spreading of the great cause which soothes the anguished heart and which is destined to change the whole outlook of human affairs." So read the commitment.

"God bless him for his beautiful and unselfish life, for his courage and fearlessnes, for his never failing championship of those suffering under injustice and for the help he gave to those who were in sorrow.

"No thought of self touched his daily life. No man more truly and faithfully walked in his Master's footsteps."

Dennis Conan Doyle, eldest son, was kept away from the funeral by illness, but Lady Doyle, her two daughters and son, Adrian, were present. The Rev. Dr. C. C. Angell, the novelist's brother-in-law, assisted Dr. Thomas. Sir Gilbert Parker, Author's Club chairman, and several others, motored from London to honor their departed friend.

LEGGE'S RESIGNATION SOUGHT AS AFTERMATH OF HIS SPEECH

speech yesterday at Dodge City, Kans. That "the biggest hog will always lie in the trough. Kansas is now in the trough."

Mr. Legge would not comment on the request of the Levands for his retirement, which was telegraphed to President Hoover and members of the Kansas congressional delegation as well as Mr. Legge himself.

The allusion to the hog trough was made by Mr. Legge in replying to the contention of Gov. Clyde M. Reed, of Kansas, that wheat acreage reduction as advocated by the Government spokesman, would not solve problems of the Kansas farmer and that if acreage was to be curtailed it should be carried out into her States not as well equipped to grow wheat as Kansas.

"We ask an apology from Mr. Legge and, since he says he has done all he can to help the farmer, we ask his resignation," the Wichitans said in their telegram.

At the meeting here today, one of a series arranged by Secretary Hyde and Chairman Legge, to urge wheat farmers to organize and to plant less acreage, several speakers opposed the acreage reduction proposals so far as Texas is concerned.

Expressing the theory that the Panhandle territory was one of "limited opportunity" so far as crops are concerned, C. A. Bonner, economist of the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station, said it was "difficult to become enthusiastic" over a very large shift in this section's crop acreages.

"Farmers in this area are doing about the right thing," Mr. Bonner said.

"We must produce wheat or nothing." He suggested that large-scale wheat producers of this territory continue operations with a view of reducing production costs and that small-scale growers practice crop diversification, become large wheat producers or "get out of the business."

The acreage reduction program also was scored by O. M. Martin, director of extention for Texas A. and M. College, who said wheat acreage adjustment would "put the Panhandle into greater production if such a process is based upon justice, reason or equality."

The acreage reduction recommendations of the Government spokesmen were clarified by Secretary Hyde, who said the idea was not to advocate abandonment of the foreign wheat markets, but "a curtailment of production to what domestic and foreign markets will take."

(Associated Press.)

Closely following the action of two Kansas publishers yesterday in demanding the resignation of Chairman Legge of the Farm Board, Senator Capper (Republican), Kansas, joined Gov. Reed of his State in advocating that the board purchase and remove from the market an additional tonnage of wheat.

The senator, speaking to representatives of the press, proposed an amount four times as large as that suggested by Gov. Reed—recommending that the board buy 100,000,000 bushels. In his campaign against the board's acreage-reduction plan the governor has recommended purchase of 25,000,000 bushels.

Declaring the Government could not lose any money on purchase of wheat at current prices, the senator said he would take the matter up with Chairman Legge as soon as he returned from his tour of the winter hard-wheat belt in behalf of acreage reduction.

The White House made no statement in connection with the publishers' request.

Senator Capper and Senator Allen, of Kansas, said they had received no demand for Mr. Legge's resignation.

The demand for Mr. Legge's resignation is the most precipitate action the foes of his acreage reduction campaign have taken thus far. The conflict with Gov. Reed has been fought on economic lines—the governor maintaining Kansas should be allowed to produce to the limit because she could produce cheaply and turn out a superior product. The chairman's answer has been that Kansas should be the first to reduce because it is the largest wheat State and adds the greatest amount to the surplus.

It was recalled at the Farm Board that Chairman Legge's reference to the "hog in the trough" is a pet phrase of his and one he had used before in urging large cotton-producing States to reduce their acreage.

"He uses it as a simple farm term—one that speaks his own language to the farmer who has wrestled with the proclivities of the biggest pig in his pen," those familiar with him said.

INQUISITORS SILENT ON DRY-WET LOBBIES

Senator Walsh (Democrat), Montana, who has prepared practically all of the partial reports so far—all except two statements of minority views presented by Senator Robinson (Republican), Indiana—is represented as feeling that it is time for some one else to do some work. Senator Walsh is taking an active part in the deliberations on the London naval treaty and, moreover, has a campaign on his hands this fall.

Senator Robinson holds to the view, in which he has little support, that the Senate having been convened for the consideration of executive business it would be improper to inject anything not falling in that category.

Senator Borah (Republican), Idaho, the fifth member, practically withdrew from the lobby committee several months ago and has taken no part in its activities since. He has his hands full with the treaty fight and is not interested in airing the wet and dry controversy just now. Mr. Borah also comes up for reelection this year.

More time than has been customarily required for the preparation of partial reports has elapsed since the last witness was heard by the lobby committee. The last meeting was on June 12, when Bishop Cannon made good on his claim that what he did with $65,300 given him for anti-Smith campaigning in 1928 was none of the Senate's business. Capt. W. H. Stayton, the last witness for the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, concluded his testimony on May 2. The Antisaloon League closed its presentation on May 23, and the Methodist Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals on May 28.

WARRANT ISSUED FOR BAKER SUSPECT

pect had the opportunity to place the gun in the unused desk in Mr. Campbell's office. On April 23, almost two weeks after the slaying, Barrere came to Mr. Campbell's office to thank him for withdrawing a larceny charge against him, which resulted from the theft of clothing from Campbell's home.

Had Chance to "Plant" Gun.

On this occasion, the window and door of Campbell's office were open, Mr. Gloth says, and Barrere had opportunity to "plant" the gun. Then followed the visit of the mysterious "man with the wart on his nose," who questioned Campbell regarding his ownership of a .32-caliber pistol. The questions aroused Campbell's curiosity and prompted a search that ended with the discovery of the gun in his office. The connection of the mystery man with the case is unknown.

Opposed to the circumstantial case developed by the State is the alibi of two women, who claim that Barrere was in their company at the time of the murder. At 3 o'clock on April 11 Barrere came to the home of Miss Edith W. Heiner, O street, near Twenty-first street northwest. Miss Heiner says that Mrs. Harrison Smith, of East Capitol, near Second street northwest, was in Barrere's automobile. The women had engaged Barrer on several occasions to drive them around.

Miss Heiner has known Barrere since 1925. Miss Heiner and Mrs. Smith say that Barrere was in their company at the latter's home from 3 until 6 o'clock the afternon of the murder. Miss Heiner is certain of the time because she stopped to make purchases at Kann's store after she and Barrere left the Smith home. The store was closed. Then Barrere and Miss Heiner came to Miss Heiner's home. He remained awhile and then went away. The attack on Mary E. Baker, as witnessed in the Ellipse, occurred at 6:05 o'clock.

FAN DANCE OFFERED BY CENSOR AT TRIAL

SAYS DANCER WAS NUDE

New York, July 11 (A.P.).—A gray-haired police officer of dignified mein took off his horn-rimmed glasses in old Jefferson Market Court today and offered to perform a fan dance if Earl Carroll would just furnish the fans.

The officer was Acting Capt. James J. Coy, theatrical critic of the police department. He was testifying against Carroll, a stage comedian and eight comely show girls whom he had charged with staging an indecent performance.

He told of buying an $11 ticket to the Carroll "Vanities" and watching four scenes which he considered entirely inoffensive. But then came the fifth scene, a daisy field in which there lay numerous young ladies waving fans.

Dance Is Described.

"Into this scene," Coy continued, "danced Faith Bacon, waving before her two large ostrich feather fans."

"Do you identify this defendant as Faith Bacon?" the prosecutor asked, motioning to Miss Bacon where she sat with the other show folk inside the rail to rise.

Miss Bacon, a blonde in summer furs and a wide-brimmed lavender hat, took a bow.

"That's her," said Coy. "She danced with two fans waving in front of her, and when she turned to leave the stage I saw that she was nude from the nape of the neck to the soles of her feet."

Under cross-examination Coy insisted that he was positive Miss Bacon was not wearing flesh-colored tights, although he acknowledged that the lights were dimmed during the scene and that a gauze curtain hung between the dancer and the audience.

"But while she was facing the audience you had no idea that she was undraped?" defense counsel asked.

"She kept herself covered with the fans," Coy replied, "passing first one and then the other in front of her. If the fans are here I'll show you how it was done."

Judge Raps for Order.

Miss Bacon smiled and a titter ran upward through the crowded courtroom. Magistrate Maurice Gotlieb banged his gavel for order and threatened to clear the court if there were a repetition of the laughter.

Capt. Coy, not pressing his offer to give a terpsichorean performance, continued to tell of the other act to which he objected. In that act the stage was set to resemble a show window in which five wax models were impersonated by show girls. An actress was teaching Jimmy Savo, comedian, how to dress a window, and at her directions he removed stockings and otherwise altered the raiment of the living models.

The hearing was adjourned until next Tuesday, with Capt. Coy the only witness to have been called so far.

New Jersey Violinist, Who Then Shot Self, Expires in Hospital.

Paterson, N. J., July 11 (A.P.).—Roderic Meakel, 28-year-old violinist, whom prosecutor's detectives charged with the murder of Jennie Brauner, 22, in a death pact, died this afternoon at St. Joseph's Hospital.

Meakle had been in the hospital, a bullet hole in his head, since early last Sunday, when he was found staggering through the underbrush near Echo Lake close by the car where the girl's body was found. Police alleged Meakle killed the girl and then shot himself.

An investigation revealed that Meakle was married and that his wife had refused to give him up for Miss Brauer. He had spoken only twice at the hospital since he was brought there. He baceme conscious for a moment yesterday, opened his eyes and said "tomorrow, I am going to see my father and mother." A few days ago, while semiconscious, he was overheard to mutter, "she made me do it."

Sixty Fires, Work Of Bolts, Checked

Laramie Peak Blazes Are Fought by Militia; Three States Affected.

Missoula, Mont., July 11 (A.P.).—Forests of Montana, northern Idaho and Wyoming today were spotted with burned areas as the result of a terrific lightning storm which started more than 60 fires yesterday. District forestry officials said scouts and rangers controlled all of the blazes so far.

National Guard troops sent to the Laramie Peak country succeeded in bringing under control two fires in that region which had burned over 1,000 acres of timber land. One hundred and twenty men fought the flames throughout the night.

Rains around Great Falls, Mont., extinguished all blazes in that vicinity. Fear of further outbreaks at the scene of the French Creek fire in the Medicine Bow National Forest was materially lessened when a shower drenched the area. The blaze, which started June 30, destroyed 3,500 acres of timber.

KELLOGG MAY GAIN WORLD COURT POST

PANEL CHOICE IN FALL

Geneva, July 11 (A.P.).—The names of Frank B. Kellogg, former American Secretary of State and coauthor of the Kellogg-Briand peace pact, and of several other Americans are included in nominations lately sent here for the new panel of World Court judges.

Nominations have recently grown more abundant, for the new panel is to beelected by the league council in September. In accordance with World Court statutes they are made by "national groups" generally composed of representatives of those groups at The Hague court of arbitration.

Mr. Kellogg was named by the Danish National group, and it is expected that as a tribute to one of the authors of the Paris pact other groups also will name him.

James Brown Scott, lawyer, educator, and international jurist, of Washington, has been nominated by the Cubans. He was delegate to the sixth Pan-American Congress in Havana in 1928.

Charles Cheney Hyde, professor of international law and diplomacy at Columbia University, New York, was nominated by the Dutch.

Dr. Scott and Prof. Hyde were nominated to fill the vacancy on the court bench caused by resignation of Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes. This runs only until the new year, when the entire new panel elected in September will take their seats for nine-year terms.

The American group, composed of Newton D. Baker, Roland Boyden, John Basset Moore and Elihu Root, have not yet sent their nominations, from which the other countries will take their cue as to the American favorite.

All nominations are due to be in before August 12.

Otto Reported Ready For Hungary's Throne

Vienna, July 11 (A.P.).—Preparations for occupation of the Hungarian throne by Prince Otto are far advanced, according to a report today in the newspaper Der Abend.

The journal says the legitimists will issue a declaration November 20, Otto's birthday, and they already have drafted a bill annuling the dethronement of the Emperor Charles as accomplished under duress. Another bill sets a limit to the period in office of Regent Horthy and nominates him viceroy or paladin, so that when Otto desires he may proclaim himself king.

Mafia Trial Witnesses Tell of Death Pledge

Sciacca, Sicily, July 11 (A.P.).—Witnesses at the trials of 241 members of the dread Sicilian Mafia Society today testified that when the Mafia decided to kill a man in order to preserve their secrets they not only slew the man, but through fear of revenge, all his near relatives, too.

Stephen Genova told the court his brothers Salvatore, Rosario and Liborio were all killed because he was trying to ascertain the murderers of his friend Azzo. He said the murderers were the Locascio brothers, who are on trial.

ARCHDUKE IS JAILED IN NECKLACE FRAUD

GEMS NAPOLEON'S GIFT

New York, July 11.—An archduke, scion of one of the oldest royal houses in Europe, went to jail here today voluntarily, because he is in a hurry to get back to Vienna, where, he said, there is a movement to replace his family on the Austrian throne.

A plain Leopold Hapsburg—a name that emperors bore—he was held in the Tombs, charged with taking part in the fraudulent sale to a New York jewler of a historic diamond necklace that belonged to his aunt, the Archduchess Maria Theresa of Austria.

Napoleon gave the necklace to his empress, the Hapsburg Maria Louisa, on the birth of their only son, the little Duke of Reichstadt, and, although it is said to be worth nearly $500,000, it was sold here last winter for $60,000.

The Archduke Leopold, indicted with Col. and Mrs. Charles L. Townsend, who are charged with actually having sold the necklace, was at liberty until today under $7,500 bail. His trial was set for October.

But today he asked a general sessions court judge to set his bail aside. Being in prison, he may be tried this summer because prison cases are given preference here during the hot months.

After he had explained his reasons to Judge Rosalsky, he was told he must "take his turn with the rest."

The necklace was sold by Col. Townsend last winter to D. M. Michel, a Fifth avenue jeweler. The Archduchess Marie Theresa charged that Townsend, representing himself as a former member of the British colonial secret service, persuaded her to let him try to sell it in this country. She said he sold it at a little more than a tenth of its actual value without her consent and sent her a check for about $7,000, writing that the rest of the $60,000 was due him for expenses.

She sent her friend, the Baroness Anna Eisenmenger, to New York to recover the necklace and paid Michel, who said he had bought it in good faith, part of his purchase price to get it back.

Leopold was in New York at the time of the sale and is charged with having connived to bring it about. The Townsends have not been arrested.

CAPT. HAWKS HURT AS PLANE CRASHES

Mystery Ship Being Tested for Dash Across U. S. Falls at Wichita.

RECORD TRY IS DELAYED

Wichita, Kans., July 11 (A.P.).—Capt. Frank Hawks escaped with minor injuries here today when a new speed plane, the Mystery S, which he was testing in preparation for an attempt to lower his East-West transcontinental flight record, crashed to the ground while traveling between 80 and 90 miles an hour.

Hawks suffered only slight cuts on the shoulders and neck.

The engine stalled as Hawks was returning to the Travelair Field, after a trial flight. The undercarriage of the plane struck telephone wires at the edge of the field, and the ship plunged nose-first to the ground, turning over twice. Hawks remained with the plane, which was badly damaged.

The flier had planned to leave here tomorrow for New York to await the start of his record attempt, with stops scheduled at Indianapolis, Wichita and Albuquerque. He now holds the East-West nonstop record. Hawks said the mishap would delay his project about a month.

After his injuries were treated at the airport he telephoned sponsors of his flight in New York and received authorization to have the plane repaired immediately.

Hawks has held several cross-country flight records. He has spent a month here testing the Mystery S.

MRS. F. B. RIDENOUR IS GRANTED DIVORCE

MATE'S PLEA DISMISSED

Absolute divorce from F. Berton Ridenour, of Chevy Chase, Md., a civil engineer, was granted to Mrs. J. Blanche Wright Ridenour, 757 Quebec street northwest, yesterday by Judge Robert B. Peter in circuit court at Rockville. The divorce was granted on the grounds of infidelity and desertion. A cross-bill filed by the husband alleging desertion was dismissed.

In her petition the wife alleged that Ridenour had deserted her for the company of a stenographer in his office, who also was married, and that the stenographer was the mother of a child by Ridenour which died at birth.

The case was unusual, as a Christian Science Church practitioner, Mrs. Emma S. Hart, departed from the laws of the church to testify in behalf of the wife. The practitioner had obtained permission from the leaders of the church to divulge the secrets told her in the course of an attempted settlement of the "mental ills" of the couple. The church held that the by-law was not intended to hide sin and that the practitioner was not bound to secrecy.

Mrs. Ridenour was represented by Milton Whitney, jr., Washington attorney. She was granted alimony of $110 a month, the husband's salary having been given as $110 per week. The couple was married September 3, 1921, at Washington.

HOOVER'S REFUSAL OF DATA HELD SURE TO DELAY TREATY

The resolution of Senator Norris is as follows:

"Whereas, in the consideration of said treaty, the Senate, on the 10th day of July, 1930, requested the President of the United States to submit to the Senate all letters, cablegrams, minutes, memoranda, instructions and dispatches, and all record files and other information touching the negotiations of said treaty; and

"Whereas, the President of the United States has declined to comply with said request, and the Senate, therefore, in acting upon said treaty, has been compelled to do so without any opportunity to give consideration to the letters, memoranda and other documents and communications leading up to the drafting of said treaty or in negotiating the same: Therefore, be it

"Resolved by the Senate, that in ratifying said treaty the Senate does so with the distinct and explicit understanding that there are no secret files, documents, letters, understandings or agreements which in any way, directly or indirectly, modify, change, add to or take away from any of the stipulations, agreements or statements in said treaty; and that the Senate rattifies said treaty with the distinct and explicit understanding that there is no agreement, secret or otherwise, expressed or implied, between any of the parties to said treaty as to any construction that shall hereafter be given to any statement or provision contained therein."

Senator Hiram Johnson concluded the day's proceedings before a recess was taken until 11 o'clock Monday. Plans for a Saturday session had to be abandoned when it became obvious that there would be no quorum.

Reed Attacks Navy.

Senator Reed made a desperate effort to nullify Senator Hale's prepared speech and the senator from Pennsylvania found many occasions to vent his ire against the officers of the United States Navy whose testimony before the Senate committees has been damaging to the treaty. He referred to the admirals as "bureaucrats" and as "those admirals who see so much of Washington and so little of the sea." He spoke scathingly of the general board of the Navy which sits "in all the rigidity of its self-delusion."

Efforts of Senator Oddie to defend the Navy were brushed aside by Senator Reed, who refused to yield. Senator McKellar managed to extract an admission from Mr. Reed that the British had sought to bring up freedom of the seas for discussion at London, but that the American delegation had refused to permit this doctrine to be discussed. Mr. Reed also admitted that Secretary Stimson had kept back from the Senate foreign relations committee the really important secret data when he sent documents marked confidential to the committee. This point was seized upon later by Senator Johnson.

Mr. Hale's Objections.

After an exhaustive analysis of the treaty, based on expert naval opinion, Senator Hale vigorously opposed ratification.

"Mr. President," said Senator Hale, "the points to which I most distinctly do object in the treaty are the following:

"1. The escalator clause in article 21 of the treaty.

"2. Denial to the United States of the right to build an adequate number of the type of cruisers that our naval needs so imperatively demand, and the complete surrender to the British of the American position hitherto so strenuously insisted upon for our national security, that the cruiser category shall not be subdivided.

"3. The raising of the Japanese ratio.

"The real purpose of this article, (Article 21), is to enable Great Britain, should France and Italy increase their building programs, to increase her own allotment under Part III, in order to keep up a 2-power standard in Europe. Should she do so we may follow along, building in kind; and Japan may do the same, subject to the ratio provided for her. If Great Britain feels that she needs to increase her destroyer forces to take care of new submarine construction by France or Italy, we must follow along and build destroyers that we do not want in order to keep up the treaty parity. In other words, if the British admiralty decides that Great Britain must build ships of a certain category to keep up the 2-power standard, we must build the ships recommended by the British admiralty to keep up this standard which we care nothing about, or sacrifice the treaty parity.

No Real Arms Limit.

"As both France and Italy have clearly indicated that they intend to increase their navies, and as Great Britain has insisted that she intends to keep up the 2-power standard in Europe, obviously there is no real limitation of armament by this treaty, and the choice of determining the increase in armament, when it comes about, will lie entirely with the nation that conceives itself to be menaced."

After asserting that the American delegation surrendered bag and baggage to Great Britain and Japan at London, Senator Hale said:

"The attack of the Secretary of State on the officers of the Navy is entirely unwarranted. He tells us that their criticisms should not prevail against the treaty because they are fighting men. They are fighting men. They understand the problems of war, and they realize that what the Secretary of State calls the preventive measures of international relations, which are intended to make war less likely, may or may not operate successfully.

"The Navy does not desire to prevent such measures, but it does wish to provide, in case such measures do not operate successfully and war does come, that the national defense shall not be threatened.

Hale Sees Sacrifice.

"The trouble with the Secretary of State is that he goes ahead against the experience of history in the blind belief and confidence that the preventive measures referred to will not fail, and he sees no necessity for adequate provisions for the national defense in case of failure, because he can see no possibility of failure. With him the securing of an international agreement is wholly important.

"The United States Navy, the first line of defense of the country, its guaranty of continued national life, has become little more than a trading asset, armed with which the Secretary of State may ride forth to win his spurs. A treaty he must bring home. If to get that treaty a sacrifice of national security is necessary that is a trivial matter. The sacrifice must be made—the spurs must be won.

"Mr. President, I, for one, am getting very tired of having this country of ours dragged into conferences on limitation of armaments that have not been properly prepared for, and then being held up and told that unless we recede from some contention vital to our interests that the conference must fail. Why can not we put the onus of failure upon some other shoulders than our own?"

PRESIDENT'S TEXT

(Associated Press.)

The text of President Hoover's message to the Senate holding it incompatible with the public interest to turn over the secret documents touching on the London Naval Treaty follows:

I have received Senate Resolution No. 320, asking me, if not incompatible with the public interest, to submit to the Senate all letters, cablegrams, minutes, memoranda, instructions and dispatches, and all records, files and other information touching the negotiations of the London Naval Treaty.

This treaty, like all other international negotiations, has involved statements, reports, tentative and informal proposals as to subjects, persons, and governments given to me in confidence. The Executive, under the duty of guarding the interests of the United States; in the protection of future negotiations, and in maintaining relations of amity with other nations, must not allow himself to become guilty of a breach of trust by betrayal of these confidences.

He must not affront representatives of other nations, and thus make future dealings with those nations more difficult and less frank. To make public in debate or in the press such confidences would violate the invariable practice of nations. It would close to the United States those avenues of information which are essential for future negotiations and amicable intercourse with the nations of the world. I am sure the Senate does not wish me to commit such a breach of trust.

I have no desire to withhold from the Senate any information having even the remotest bearing upon the negotiation of the treaty. No Senator has been refused an opportunity to see the confidential material referred to, provided only he will agree to receive and hold the same in the confidence in which it has been received and held by the executive.

A number of senators have availed themselves of this opportunity. I believe that no Senator can read these documents without agreeing with me that no other course than to insist upon the maintenance of such confidence is possible. And I take this opportunity to repeat with the utmost emphasis that in these negotiations there were no secret or concealed understandings, promises or interpretations, nor any commitments whatever except as appear in the treaty itself and in the interpretive exchange of notes recently suggested by your committee on Foreign affairs, all of which are now in the hands of the Senate.

In view of this, I believe that to further comply with the above resolution would be incompatible with the public interest.

HERBERT HOOVER.

VOCATIONAL SCHOOL HEARING DUE TODAY

Large Number Expected to Attend Fairfax County Committee Meeting.

THREE HURT IN CRASH

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST,
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 2324-W-2.

A public hearing will be held this morning at 10 o'clock in the Fairfax County Courthouse on the question of locating the proposed central vocational high school for Fairfax County. The hearing will be conducted by a joint committee composed of two members of the school board, Herbert Williams, of Providence District, and John T. DeBell, of Centerville District, two members of the Fairfax Board of Supervisors, Mark Turner, of Dranesville District, and Kyle Davis, of Lee District, and a citizen of the county, C. C. Carr, of Legato.

This question has been thoroughly discussed during the past month in all sections of the county.

A large number of delegations have signified their intention of attending today's meeting. Some will come ready to offer specific sites free of charge to the county, while others will attend merely to express the general views of their local organizations. The most important questions facing this board are the methods of financing the building of the school and the most central location, so that the largest number of school children in the county will be benefited by the courses offered.

Herbert Williams, chairman of the joint committee, has been in conference with the State school officials in Richmond in regard to the establishment of such a school. They offered to make a survey of the county and assist the local officials in any manner possible. At the present time the State assists liberally in establishing vocational classes for adults in both day and night schools and the State board of education is endeavoring to have the law so amended that it can contribute more liberally to the vocational training of young people. It is stated that if such a vocational school as planned for Fairfax County is established, that night classes for adults would be held as soon as possible.

Three persons were injured when the car of Joseph Cunningham, of 624 Elliott street northeast, Washington, swerved into a ditch at the entrance of Fort Humphreys allegedly to avoid hitting a car driven by W. Mills, who investigated the accident, took Cypress before Justice of the Peace Harry Shephard, at Accotink, where a charge of failing to give signal when stopping was dismissed because of lack of evidence.

W. F. Almon, of Mount Carmel, Va., and R. J. Henderson of M near Twenty-seventh street, Washington, were arrested by Capt. Haywood J. Durrer, of the county road police, for reckless driving. Justice of Peace Harry Shephard, at Accotink, fined each $10 and costs.

The west end division of the Women's Auxiliary of the Fairfax Volunteer Fire Department will hold a food sale this afternoon, beginning at 2 o'clock, at Nickell's Store at Fairfax. The seventh annual carnival of the Falls Church Volunteer Fire Department will open this evening at 7 o'clock on the grounds adjoining the town hall and will continue through next week. A band concert will be given each evening from 7 to 9 o'clock and will be followed by dancing. Wednesday and Saturday nights of next week gold prizes will be given to the housewives for the best home-baked cake.

The lighting of the grounds will be arranged in a Maypole design and will be in charge of Fire Chief E. M. Ward. Many new attractions are listed for this year's carnival. The ladies' auxiliary of the department will hold a barbecue and serve home-cooked food at all hours.

R. E. Kendrick is the general chairman and will be assisted by Z. B. Groves, J. R. Royston, Vernon Whitner, R. L. Harmon, George Clarke, Joseph Birch, Bernard Atwell, E. E. Eldridge, Boyd Case, Douglas Royston and others as subchairmen.

Mrs. Jennie E. Hutton, 69, of Falls Church, Va., died at her home in Falls Church yesterday after a long illness. She was the widow of Samuel E. Hutton, who died four years ago. She is survived by her daughter, Miss Iris E. Hutton of Falls Church, one brother M. C. Smith, of Cincinnati, Ohio, and two sisters, Mrs. Alice Goldenburg, of Cincinnati, and Mrs. Julia L. Corbly, of Chicago, Ill. Mrs. Hutton was active in social and church work for the past 23 years in Falls Church.

Funeral services will be held this afternoon at 3 o'clock at the home, with the Rev. U. S. Knox, pastor of the Columbia Baptist Church, of which she was a member, officiating. Interment will be in the Spring Hill Cemetery in Cincinnati.

ROCKVILLE RELIEVED OF DROUGHT DANGER

Ice Plant Permits Use of Deep Wells and Fire Engines Do Rest.

CAREFUL USE ORDERED

Rockville was saved from the menace of an actual drought yesterday by the Rockville Volunteer Fire Department. The water situation in the county seat of Montgomery County became so acute that the wells which supply the town were practically empty and the residents were faced with the possibility of water rations.

The Rockville ice plant, however, offered the water from two artesian wells from which water for the manufacture of ice is pumped, and the fire department dispatched an engine to pump the water to the town water mains. The steady pumping of the fire engine saved the situation, making available about 1,200 extra gallons of water an hour, which is believed to be sufficient to carry the town through until rain replenishes the town wells, if the citizens cooperate in saving water.

The water tower on top of the moving picture theater was empty yesterday and one of the soda fountains in the town was dry all day. Other water shortages were reported to the mayor and council. Mayor J. Roger Spates has called upon the citizens to conserve water as much as possible and has issued an order forbidding the watering of lawns and other unnecessary uses of the liquid.

In the meantime plans for a hookup with the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission mains are going ahead. It being hoped that the connection can be effected this summer.

Members of the Republican State central committee for Montgomery County and precinct leaders met yesterday in Rockville to discuss candidates for the Republican County convention which will be held shortly. The names of those chosen were not made public.

Judge Charles W. Woodward acted yesterday to guard against release of prisoners sent to the House of Correction from his court, following the report that a Prince Georges County prisoner had been released on a writ of habeas corpus when it was discovered that the clerk of the police court had signed the commitments and not the judge. Judge Woodward signed duplicate commitments for all prisoners at the House of Correction and forwarded them.

Suit for $50,000 damages was filed in circuit court at Rockville yesterday by Mrs. Naomi E. Selby, of Gaithersburg. The suit alleges that her husband, Marion W. Selby, lost his life in a railroad accident through the negligence of an agent of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad. Attorney Stedman Prescott, of Rockville, represents the widow.

Mr. Selby was killed October 9 was riding with other railroad employes was struck by backing engine at Rockville crossing. Mr. Selby was a section foreman for the railroad and he and the crew of the car were answering an emergency call to clear the line's tracks of an upset freight car. Four of the men on the car were killed and three injured. The suit charges that the accident was caused by the failure of an agent of the company to make sure that the right of way was clear. The case is docketed for hearing in November.

Thomas C. Waters, of Olney, was granted an absolute divorce from Mrs. Florida P. Waters, whose address is given as the Home for Incurables, Baltimore, Md., on the grounds of desertion, yesterday by Judge Robert B. Peter in Rockville Circuit Court. The husband was represented by Attorney Kenneth Lyddane, of Rockville.

The couple were married January 13, 1914, at Hagerstown and have no children.

Veteran to Bring Barred Bride Back

(Associated Press.)

John Munsill Ulrich, World War veteran of New Haven, Conn., who married a German girl barred from this country on charges involving moral turpitude, is going to bring his wife home.

"My heartfelt thanks to you who introduced the bill and championed our cause. We will not forget it. John Ulrich."

60 NEGRO MOTHERS ON WAY TO FRANCE

RECEIVED IN NEW YORK

New York, July 11 (A.P.).—From the region of the South's plantations and from the cities of the North and West 60 Negro gold star mothers and widows gathered in New York today "for the grandest trip the Lord ever put in the minds of the Government."

Jubilant or bewildered, sad or gay, they scurried through the hotels of Harlem, intent on plans for tomorrow, when they will sail on the American merchant, chartered solely for them, to visit the graves of their sons and husbands in France.

From earringed young widows to grey-haired mothers, reminiscent of the days "before the war," they had but one idea. The companions with which their soldiers fought, the dates on which they died, even the names of the cemeteries where they lie, were often forgotten. If they remembered was—"We're going to visit his grave in France."

Two Rejoice Together.

Mrs. Mamie Sills, of Omaha, Nebr., wife of Lemmon Sills, and Mrs. Annie Bowie, of Los Angeles, Calif., mother of Corpl. Benjamin Bowie, stanch friends since they met on the train two days ago, rejoiced together, with small thought for the segregation that agitated some of the Negro mothers enough to cause cancellation of the trips.

"I'm going if there don't nobody go but myself," said Mrs. Sills, "was the color line drawed when they put us all on one boat? The color line was drawed when God made the world. I thank the Lord for enabling me to get this far on the trip."

"Amen!" said Mrs. Bowie.

"I don't just remember how old Lem was when he died," said Mrs. Sills, "but I know he died in a hospital after he was wounded in battle.

"Heaven Only Thing Better."

"He was right up there fightin' and now the Government's fixed it so I can go and see his grave, the only way I could be treated any better would be to be going to heaven, tell them I said so and let the world read it."

"Amen!" said Mrs. Bowie.

At the City Hall reception to the mothers, city officials and others praised them for their sacrifices. Acting Mayor McKee told them, "we greet you as we did the other mothers and offer up a prayer for your safe return." Two Negro city officials, who spoke at the reception, made renewed charges of race discrimination.

Alderman Fred R. Moore (Republican), said he believed that "it would have gone toward a better understanding if the gold star mothers, white and black, visited the graves together." Commissioner Q. Morton, Democratic member of the municipal Civil Service Commission, advised the mothers not to "allow your hearts to be embittered by the insult offered you by the Government at Washington."

The following resolution pledging support to President Hoover was adopted:

Pastor of St. Paul's Plans Lecture Series

Dr. Henry W. Snyder, pastor of St. Paul's Lutheran Church, is in demand as a lecturer. Next week he goes to the Lutheran Chautauqua, Lakeside, on Lake Erie, Ohio, to deliver a course of five lectures on "Saving the Waste." He will also conduct a conference for pastors each morning during the convention, which is held annually under the auspices of the joint synod of Ohio of the Lutheran Church.

From August 5 to 14 Dr. Snyder also will serve on the faculty of the Lutheran Summer Assembly at Susquehanna University, Selinsgrove, Pa., having charge of the morning devotions and Bible study. Dr. Snyder and Dr. Harry T. Domer, of this city, are both members of the board of directors of the assembly.

A large group of Washington Lutherans will be in attendance at this assembly, which is now entering upon its eleventh year.

CLERK'S ACT RAISES COUNTY LAW POINT

Prince Georges Officials to Seek Opinion in Case of Commitment.

DIVORCE SUITS ARE FILED

Having discovered that Judge Walter I. Dawkins, of Baltimore, did not have references to the county police court law before him when he released Fred H. Strebel on a writ of habeas corpus, Prince Georges County officials plan to ask an opinion from the Attorney General of Maryland on the constitutionality of the county law.

In the meantime, Judge J. Chew Sheriff, county police court magistrate, has decided to sign all commitments to the House of Correction until the situation is clarified. Thomas R. Henault, clerk of the police court, prior to the questioning of his authority, had signed the commitments. The county police court law gives the clerk power to sign commitments, a clause in the law specifying that the clerk of the police court "shall have the general authority to do any and all things in connection with his duties as the clerk of the circuit court is possessed of, in so far as the same are applicable."

State's Attorney J. Frank Parran, of Prince Georges County, received the official account of the habeas corpus hearing yesterday and this revealed that the judge had not taken into consideration the county police court law in passing his decision. Judge Dawkins released Stroebel on a writ of habeas corpus after he found that the clerk and not the judge had signed the commitment, holding that inasmuch as the police court is not a court of record, the committing magistrate should sign the commitment under the Maryland constitution. County officials, however, hold that the act of the Legislature specifically gave the power to the clerk.

Two men were fined yesterday on charges of driving an automobile while under the influence of intoxicants by Judge J. Chew Sheriff in Upper Marlboro branch of Prince Georges County Police Court. Both men were arrested by State Policeman W. T. Booker and each was fined $101. Claude Ritchie, of Ritchie, Md., was fined $102, the extra dollar being for failing to have his permit in possession. The other defendant was Edward Williams, colored, of Washington.

Charles Hoile, of Oakland, Md., arrested in a raid upon his house by Deputy Sheriffs L. E. Dutrow and Earl Blackwell, was fined $150 on charges of illegal possession of intoxicants, and Thomas Marshall, colored, who pleaded guilty to possession of intoxicants, was fined $50. He was arrested by County Policeman Claude Reese.

Two suits for divorce were filed in Circuit Court at Upper Marlboro yesterday. Through Attorney John S. White, Mrs. Alma E. Jacobi asks a limited divorce and alimony from Alfred J. Jacobi, a clerk in the U. S. Patent Office, alleging desertion. The couple was married in 1924 and separated February 4, 1930.

Mrs. Enid Tenley, of Brooklyn, N. Y., asks an absolute divorce from Mahlon C. Tenley, of Prince Georges County, alleging desertion. The marriage took place in 1925.

Hoover to Leave For Camp Today

Senate Recess Till Monday Allows President to Take Week-End Trip.

(Associated Press.)

President Hoover decided suddenly late yesterday to spend the week-end at his lodge on the head waters on the Rapidan. Learning that the Senate had adjourned until Monday, the President immediately decided to leave early today and return tomorrow.

Mrs. Hoover will accompany him, with a number of other guests who were invited after the change in plans.

The trout season has closed in Virginia, but Mr. Hoover is expecting shortly to try his luck at bass fishing. There are no bass in the streams on his preserve, but he has been invited to fish in nearby spots near Elkton and Luray. Because of his tardy departure today he will not attempt, however, to reach the streams on this trip.

Bids will be opened by the school board July 28 at 10:30 o'clock. The money will be used for additions to the school buildings at Lyon Park, Bon Air, Aurora Hills and Aurora Heights, Superintendent Kemp said.

Plans and specifications for the additions to the above-named school buildings will be available to contractors by Wednesday of next week at the office of Superintendent Kemp and also at the office of the State Architect, Raymond V. Long, at Richmond, Va.

Ground was broken for Arlington County's first modern apartment house yesterday by William H. Dawson, contractor, of Herndon, for M. A. Mace, of Arlington County.

The building will be a three-story structure, located on Garrison road, Clarendon, and will be of stone construction, costing $45,000.

According to Mr. Mace, the building will have a 50-foot setback from the building line and will have many attractive features, including a sunken garden.

The plans and specifications were prepared by A. F. Thelander, architect, of Arlington County. The contract provides for the building to be completed in 90 days.

While the plans have not been completed, Mr. Mossburg stated that the affair promises this year to far exceed those of past years. Invitations have already gone out to more than 40 fire companies in Virginia, Maryland and as far North as New Jersey to attend. There will be a prize given to the department coming the greatest distance.

Saturday, August 16, will be the big day. It will open with a huge parade, covering all the main highways in Arlington and Fairfax Counties. The committee hopes to have as honor guest on that day Gov. John Garland Pollard.

With more than 40 persons attending, plans were formulated to complete a house-to-house canvass to make a check of all voters and to arrange for getting out the vote on election day.

President Gordon predicts that Mr. Ball will carry the Virginia Highlands Precinct by a handsome majority over his four opponents in the primary.

Monday night there will be a meeting of the club which has been organized in Clarendon Precinct No. 2 at the home of Harry K. Green on Chestnut street. All members and others interested in the movement to boost Mr. Ball in Arlington County are invited to attend.

Abram V. Sager, 81 years old, of Five Oaks Station, near Fairfax, Va., died yesterday in the Emergency Hospital from injuries received last Tuesday afternoon when struck by a street car at Five Oaks.

DRY LAWS ATTACKED BY HOUSE CANDIDATE

Thomas R. Keith, of Fairfax, in Radio Talk, Says Act Causes Lawlessness.

STATE CONTROL URGED

Special to The Washington Post.

Alexandria, July 11.—Declaring Federal prohibition to be responsible for the wave of crime and official debauchery that is now sweeping over the country, Thomas R. Keith, of Fairfax, launched his campaign for the Democratic nomination for Congress in the Eighth district tonight in a speech delivered over Station WJSV. A return to the doctrine of States' rights and the principle of allowing the States to handle their own liquor problem in their own way, Mr. Keith said, is the only remedy for the evils of the existing situation.

The candidate prefaced his remarks with an indorsement of the work undertaken for the district by the incumbent, Representative Moore, and pledged himself to continue the work for the projects which he has sponsored. Otherwise, his remarks were devoted almost entirely to a discussion of prohibition, which, he said, had produced a degree of lawlessness having no parallel outside of the unhappy days of reconstruction in the South.

"When will this condition of affairs cease?" he asked. "Not until we have wiped from our statute books the laws that are responsible for this situation.

"Federal prohibition has given growth to an industry, the handling of illicit liquor, that rivals in capital and in the number of persons employed in it almost any of our great commercial enterprises, and goes free of any tax. It provides the means of capitalizing crime and lawlessness; it fills our jails with criminals, and congests our courts of justice with a multitude of cases to the prejudice of other legal business, and yet only a very small proportion of the offenders are ever brought to justice. The efforts to enforce Federal prohibition, paid for at an enormous cost to the taxpayers of the country, have proven a lamentable failure. It is a sad commentary upon our reputation as a law-abiding people. After ten years of Federal prohibition, the illicit liquor business is greater and more powerful than ever before. Instead of diminishing, it is increasing.

"The only remedy lies in returning to the States the power unwisely transferred to the United States Government, and the enactment of such legislation as will command social respect and local enforcement. I favor such action in the cause of true temperance."

CAPTIVES TAKEN TO JAIL

Grundy, Va., July 11 (A.P.).—Two men were fatally shot and three others were injured, one seriously, in a gun battle in the Paw Paw section of Knox Creek after what officers said today was an attempt to interfere with arrests of persons charged with violations of the prohibition laws.

Hyson Baker, Buchanan County constable, and Thomas Dotson, one of the men sought by the officers, were killed. Howard Justus and David J. Smith, deputy sheriffs, are in the Hurley Hospital, the former in a critical condition, and Hillman Tester, another of those the officers sought to arrest, is in a Richlands Hospital with a wound in the hand.

Early Wednesday, according to the officers' report, Hyson Baker and Howard Justus raided a still in the Paw Paw section, and arrested five men. As they started for Grundy with their prisoner, they said, a group of men rode past them firing on them and warning them not to return to the neighborhood.

After seeing their prisoners safely locked up the officers went back. When they reached Dotson's home, they said, Dotson and Hillman Tester were in the yard. When told that they were under arrest, the men are alleged to have opened fire. Dotson and Baker fell in the exchange of shots and Smith was shot in the legs. The other officers were unhurt.

Mr. Pickett was prominently identified with various civic organizations in Fairfax County. He was at one time chairman of the board of supervisors of that county, and at the time of his death was president of the Groveton Community Club, to which he devoted a large part of his time. He was also a director in the Fairfax County Chamber of Commerce, and a member of the Alexandria, Arlington and Fairfax Realtors Association. He was a member of Alexandria Lodge, No. 758, B. P. O. Elks. In addition to his real estate business, Mr. Pickett served as a magistrate for the Mount Vernon district, which position he held at the time of his death.

Bread Prices Slashed After Paper's Expose

Special to The Washington Post.

Winchester, Va., July 11.—Retailers were gradually reducing the price of bread today, following a newspaper announcement that bakers had lowered the price 1 cent a loaf to the retailers. Some of the latter still were holding out for the old price of 10 cents a loaf, claiming there was a loss in delivering bread unless accompanied by other goods, but many dealers were breaking away from the former price.

Bakers are selling bread to retailers at 8 cents, instead of 9, as formerly, saying they can produce the same quality and weight of loaf now because of the slump in the grain and flour markets.

Grafton Seriously Hit By Burst Water Mains

Grafton, W. Va., July 11 (A.P.).—Grafton faced a serious situation today as city water mains burst for the fourth time and the city had only a meager supply of water for emergency purposes. Industrial plants using water were closed because of the shortage.

The fourth break occurred during the night. It had not been located in the mains this morning. A main burst Tuesday, and two others broke yesterday and last night. In addition to the hardship resulting from the rupture of the city water system, the district is suffering from a prolonged drought. A well that furnished water for the old town pump two-score years ago has been uncovered. The location was known only to a few older residents of the town. It was in constant use today.

NEW CITY CHURCHES BEAUTIFY CAPITAL

Several Edifices Enhancing Its Attractiveness Are Now Under Way.

ALL SECTS CONTRIBUTE

Keeping pace with the Government's building program is that of the churches of Washington. There never was such an era of ecclesiastical construction as is now under way, and when it is finished the Nation's Capital will be better "churched" than any city of its size in the country.

Work is being pushed rapidly on the National Church which the Vermont Avenue Christian congregation is building at Thomas Circle. This marble temple of severely classic Greek architecture will be one of the most imposing buildings in the city. It follows the cathedral style in its simple and dignified lines. Dr. Earle Willey is pastor of this church.

Across the city, facing Grant Circle, Bishop John M. McNamara is building, for the Catholic parish of St. Gabriel's, one of the handsomest Catholic churches in the city. It is Byzantine in architecture, of stone construction, and when completed will be a delight to every Catholic in the community.

New Lutheran Church.

A few Sundays ago St. Paul's Lutheran congregation, of which Dr. Henry W. Snyder is pastor, broke ground at Connecticut avenue and Ellicott street for its new house of worship. A fourteenth century gothic church has been copied by the architect in his plans, and this new edifice will have a striking appearance and a medieval atmosphere.

Twenty-three years after ground was broken by Dean Bratenahl for Washington Cathedral, Mount St. Alban's, ground was again broken for the foundation of the south transept of the Cathedral. Work will be rushed on this wing of the Cathedral, as well as on the north transept, as it is hoped to have the Cathedral nearly complete when the Washington bicentennial is held.

Washington Cathedral will be the largest, the most imposing and the most beautiful church in the National Capital when it is completed. It will cost $10,000,000 or more. As the custodian of the mortal remains of Woodrow Wilson, Admiral Dewey and Melville E. Stone, it has an interest attached to no other church here.

National Presbyterian Church.

Sometime this autumn ground will be broken for the National Presbyterian Church, on a site yet to be chosen, but which probably will be on Massachusetts avenue. This church has plans drawn by the famous Boston architect, Ralph Cram, who specializes in gothic church architecture; and if they are followed, this new Presbyterian cathedral will attract no end of attention. The Church of the Covenant and the First Church form the congregation.

In the Government building program the historic old Methodist church, known as the Metropolitan, has been purchased, and will be torn down to make room for the new District buildings. Dr. James Shera Montgomery's congregation, therefore, will have to look for a new site and erect a new building.

As the Methodist Episcopal Church has no national church here, it is probable that advantage will be taken of this change to build one. Whatever plans are being made to this end are not yet open to public inspection.

Hoovers Aid Friends Church.

Plans have been approved and accepted for the new Friends Church, which President and Mrs. Hoover are helping. It will be located at 2109 Decatur Place, and like all Quaker chapels, will be simple in design. Its estimated cost is given at $66,000.

There was a report in circulation to the effect that this will be a national church and will celebrate the reunion of the Hicksites and the orthodox branches of the Friends Society. Careful inquiry raises a doubt as to this.

The projectors of the new church state that every Quaker will be welcomed to worship there, and that it would be a grand thing if they would all get together. There the matter rests.

Full Gospel Tabernacle To Mark Anniversary

A special program tomorrow will mark the third anniversary of the purchase of the building of the Full Gospel Tabernacle, North Capitol and K streets, when all-day services will be held. The congregation moved into this building from a hall on Pennsylvania avenue three years ago, and has made rapid progress, with a large addition to its membership. A large portion of the building debt has been extinguished and several branches have been established in Maryland and Virginia.

The church has also sent and maintained several missionaries on the foreign field. The present minister, the Rev. Harry L. Collier, has been in charge of the work for nearly fifteen years. Short addresses will be made by officers of the church on the progress of the work at the service at 11 a. m., and the pastor will deliver the anniversary sermon.

First Church to Hear Methodist Minister

A distinguished Methodist minister, who at one time was president of the Methodist Ministers Association of Washington, the Rev. Dr. Samuel W. Graffiin, will fill the pulpit of the First Congregational Church tomorrow morning.

Dr. Grafflin is now at the head of religious work of the New York City Young Men's Christian Association. He is a member of the Baltimore Conference, and is widely known as a writer of religious books and a contributor to the press. Dr. Jason Noble Pierce, pastor of the First Congregational Church, is in London attending an international convention of his denomination.

Visitors Who Will Preach Tomorrow

Washington Cathedral—The Rev. Walter Lowrie, former rector of the American Church in Rome.

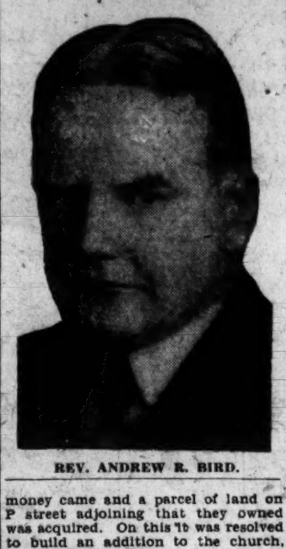
Church of the Covenant—The Rev. John D. Gregory, of Utica, N. Y.

First Congregational Church—The Rev. Samuel W. Grafflin, director of religious work of the New York Y. M. C. A.

Capital Church Built By Kin of Washington

Rev. A. R. Bird Carried Hod to Men Erecting His Edifice.

By DAVID RANKIN BARBEE.



REV. ANDREW R. BIRD.

George Washington thought very highly of the Presbyterians. In the darkest days of the Revolution he said: "If everybody else goes back on me, and all of my armies quit, I will fall back into the Valley of Virginia and gather up a force of Scotch Presbyterians and win our independence."

I didn't hear Father George say this, and I may not be quoting his exact language, but I have read this statement in many books written by Presbyterian ministers, and I heard the sainted Dr. Wallace Radcliffe repeat it but a few weeks before his lamented death, so I know it must be true.

It is a remarkable coincidence that it was an army of Scotch Presbyterians from the Virginia mountains and from the Watauga settlements in the Tennessee mountains, most of whom came from the Shenandoah Valley, who actually did, at the battle of Kings Mountain, what Washington said they would do. They whipped the British general, Ferguson, so completely that Cornwallis was glad enough to fall back to Yorktown and cry "calf rope."

Vision of Washington.

Washington had this vision of what the Scotch-Presbyterian Virginians would do when they got their dander up, but he could not vision the day when a descendant of his mother, Mary Ball, would be a Presbyterian minister; would come to Washington as pastor of the smallest church in the National Capital and in a few years build one of the largest and most beautiful cathedrals here; and then be chosen president of the Washington Federation of Churches.

These Washingtons have a way with them. They are an intensely earnest race of men and women. They believe in doing well whatever they undertake, and nothing seems to daunt them. Obstacles, they believe, were created to be overcome, and the greater the obstacle the larger the opportunity of doing something worth while in vaulting or climbing over it.

Those who know their Revolutionary history will recall that when Washington was shaming his armies by threatening to call on his Scotch-Presbyterian neighbors to finish the job for him, he was also wrestling with the Lord in prayer—yea, he was agonizing in his petitions. What a beautiful story that is of the Valley Forge winter, when a staff officer found the commanding general far from his camp, deep in the woods, prostrate in the snow, his face wet with tears and his cries for help mounting to heaven.

Answer to His Prayers.

Prayer is a part of the daily life of these Washingtons, and this Presbyterian parson nephew of the general is no stranger to the throne of grace. His life work, it would seem, has been built on prayer. The beautiful Church of the Pilgrims is an answer to his prayers.

The Rev. Andrew Reid Bird, whose grandmother was a granddaughter of Mary Ball, was given a thorough training in books for his life work. He was born in Baltimore 50 years ago, and after completing the course at the public schools there he was sent to Randolph-Macon Academy at Front Royal, Va., a Methodist institution. Then followed a college course at Johns Hopkins University, from which he graduated with an A. B. degree. Back to the Old Dominion once more, at Union Theological Seminary, in Richmond, a Southern Presbyterian institution, he pursued his theological course, taking his degree in divinity when he was 25 years of age.

Not yet was he prepared to enter the active ministry, though during his seminary course he had preached often to such congregations as are to be found in every city where "theologs" are welcomed and are sent to try their fledgling wings. Among these congregations were some of colored people. My own father was a missionary to the slaves of the South and during his long ministry he preached often to Negroes. He rather preferred them as a congregation, for they listened well. Once he said to me: "If you can please the Negroes you can please anybody." Like the Scotch, they are good sermon tasters. Dr. Bird found this out.

Travel and Study Abroad.

A year of travel and study in Europe concluded with a term at the famous Edinburgh Theological Schools. Here Dr. Bird got his final baptism of genuine Presbyterianism, and he came home ready for his life work.

One would think that such a well bred, highly cultured young minister would seek a city church; but Dr. Bird did not. His first pulpit was at Laurel, Md., where for five years he labored in the Lord's vineyard among a splendid people. It is worthy of note that several of Washington's ministers were at one time pastors of Laurel churches. It is the folks out there in that ancient town, and not the neighborhood race course, that gives Laurel its distinction.

Nineteen years ago last January this grandson of Mary Ball came to Washington to be pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church, U. S. It was a tiny congregation, composed of probably a dozen families, who worshipped in a tiny frame building on Twenty-second street northwest, near Massachusetts avenue. As a matter of fact, this church was on the regular tourist route and the conductor of the sight-seeing buses, as they passed it, always cried out: "We are now passing the smallest church in Washington, ladees and gen'man!" If he had only known who was the pastor of that tiny church, what a song he might have sung!

How Church Was Built.

The story of the Church of the Pilgrims has been told more than once, and surely it will creep into Washington history, for it is a beautiful story of prayer and faith. The pastor had both and he used both. He had a vision, and he has lived to see his vision come true. But he did not content himself with dreaming his dream and waiting on the Lord to do the rest.

The little temporary frame chapel was the grain of corn; the great stone cathedral on P street is the harvest. The Christian Church was born in an upper room at a prayer meeting, and nearly all of the great Protestant denominations had a similar humble beginning. Dr. Bird's little chapel had 100 chairs in it and a piano. Whether he was a singing Bird or a bell-ringing Bird, I do not know, but this I do know, he began to have more folks to hear him preach than his 100 chairs would seat. The folks stood patiently to hear his message. That is a habit some folks have.

In a little while the men of the church got together and talked this matter over. They decided to build a gallery in their tiny chapel, and somehow they got hold of the lumber and with saws and hammers, in the afternoons and evenings, their pastor in overalls helping them, they put up that gallery, seating 50 people, in the rear of the church.

Soon it would not hold the congregation. Then another prayer meeting and the matter was talked over with the Lord. It was decided to buy more land, and somehow the money came and a parcel of land on P street adjoining that they owned was acquired. On this it was resolved to build an addition to the church, but the World War had come on and lumber was sky high and labor was getting a king's ransom for its work. An unknown friend of the church sent word to Dr. Bird: "There are two frame buildings near your church that you can have if you will remove them." Here was an answer to prayer.

The men of the church, with crowbars and axes, tore down those buildings, and another sent his truck to move the lumber, and when it was laid on the ground they started in to build an addition to the overcrowded church. The Government refused the permit, but finally issued one with the understanding that the building was to be stuccoed with three coats of cement and pebble-dashed. Furthermore, the Government said, "We will give you 30 days' notice when we wish that building torn down."

Minister Pleads His Cause.

There were jackleg carpenters and amateur joiners in that congregation, but never a plasterer. Moreover, the plasterers were on strike. They would not work for Uncle Sam. Why should they work for Mary Ball's grandson? But they had ne'er heard Mary Ball's grandson plead his cause.

A group of them were standing on the street corner railing at Uncle Sam and contractors in general when Dr. Bird found them. He introduced himself and told his mission. No, they would not stucco his church. Then one made him an unusual proposition.

"We will do the work if you will furnish us with all the whisky we can drink."

Dr. Bird was running a church and not operating a distillery, so he smiled his sweetest and said: "Men and brethren, that would never do." Nobody had ever called them "brethren" before, so they went to one side and conferred.

"Who will mix our mortar and hod it to us?" they asked, on their return.

"I will," replied the minister.

Cleric Helps Laborers.

And it was done.

When the sightseeing buses passed down P street for the next few weeks they saw a strange sight—a dominie, with a world education, clad in overalls, plying a hoe that had holes in it like a doughnut, throwing the mortar into a hod and mounting that on his scholarly shoulders, running with it to the plasterers as they called, "mort," or "mud."

What if this hard labor did make his bones and his muscles ache, and wear blisters in his hands? He was learning the ways of his Master, who worked at the carpenter's bench. He was getting an insight into the hearts and characters of laboring men.

Every day the job was going on, the ladies of the congregation met at the manse, and in the kitchen they prepared what the plasterers, in their plebeian language, call "grub," which was served to the men while they labored and at noon time. When the last trowel of plaster had been laid on, and the last handful of gravel cast into it, Dr. Bird shook hands with his friends and said: "Men and brethren, what do I owe you?"

Worked for Nothing.

"Not a sou marquee, parson," said the spokesman.

This experience foreshadowed the big stone cathedral. It is Southern Presbyterianism's National Church in Washington. The general assembly listened to the story Dr. Bird had to tell, and said to him: "If you will raise $75,000 we will raise $125,000." And he set about doing that.

A fine old Virginia Methodist parson, named John Frazier, whom I knew when I was a lad in college in Virginia, then head chaplain of the Navy, heard what Dr. Bird was attempting to do and went to him.

"I will preach for you while you go into the highways and byways and get your $75,000."

It is a strange thing, how Methodists always come in when Presbyterians are in distress, and help them out. My father, a Methodist minister, it seemed to me, was as often shepherding a shepherdless Presbyterian flock as he was his own. It did them good to get a little of John Wesley mixed up with their John Calvin and John Knox.

Made Good on Contract.

Dr. Bird made good on his contract and the General Assembly on its, and now he has a plant that has cost $400,000 and could not be duplicated for half a million, and a congregation that fills his cathedral church.

When the Federation of Churches was organized ten years ago, Dr. Bird was a member of the organization committee, and has given of his time and labor to that institution.

As its president for the next year he will have a larger sphere of activity than he has found in his own congregation. But no matter what he does for and in the federation, it will always be said of him: "He is the man who built the Church of the Pilgrims."

PASTOR WELCOMED AT NATIVITY PARISH

Eight Priests Participate in Brightwood Infare for Rev. John Fannon.

HIGH TRIBUTE IS PAID

Nativity Parish, at Brightwood, welcomed its new pastor, the Rev. John Fannon, last Monday night with a big infare, which was largely attended.

Eight priests of the diocese of Washington, who are close personal friends of the new pastor, were present and participated in the reception. They were the Right Rev. Monsignor P. C. Gavan, the Very Rev. Thomas F. Rankin, pastor of St. Mary's Church, Alexandria, Va., and the Rev. Cornelius J. Dacey, J. Edward Malloy, Richard C. Fitzgerald, C. C. Rosensteel, Patrick E. Conroy and James J. O'Connor.

At St. Charles' College, Fathers Malloy, Rankin and O'Connor played on the same ball team with Father Fannon, who, a giant of a man, was the Babe Ruth of that team.

George E. Sullivan welcomed Father Fannon in the name of the people of the parish, and after him Father Hannemann addressed the congregation, paying a personal tribute to the priest.

Music and refreshments followed.

Silver Spring, Md., has a new Catholic church, the name to be chosen by popular vote of the congregation. Last Sunday the new pastor, the Rev. Thomas A. Calnan, celebrated his first mass in his parish.

For the present the congregation is worshipping in the Knights of Columbus Hall, which has been completely renovated and converted into a church. The stage has been removed and an alter has taken its place.

Bishop John M. McNamara, of Washington, will bless the new church, Our Lady Star of the Sea, at Solomons Island, Md., July 20. Father Alexander, the parish priest, is the first resident priest in Calvert County.

Robert Quillen's article in The Post of Friday, entitled "A Prayer to the God of Our Fathers," so favorably impressed the Rev. Michael F. Fitzpatrick, pastor of St. Aloysius Catholic Church, that he has announced that he will preach a sermon Sunday morning to his congregation, using this article and its thoughts for a text.

FAITH.

Faith is not a popular member in the family of words: nevertheless it is a primary and potent one. It represents a necessity, and by it men live. Through it, science, invention, discovery, make their ventures and civilization is sustained.

Faith is the pathway that has led men from the brute and selfishness to ethics, morality and lofty service.

Without faith, the whole structure of society would crumble into chaos and anarchy. With the loss of faith the cruel question mark of suspicion casts its shadow upon hearts we have pledged to love and cherish. Without faith, a man's life becomes a few transitory years, beginning with a cradle and ending in a grave.

Without faith, it is impossible to please God.

Faith is a valuable quality of mind. It does things. It annihilates fear, deepens aspiration, broadens life, and changes the whole of existence. The soul is brought into the Divine partnership by faith, and the promises of God are claimed. The invitation to "Cast thy burden upon the Lord and He will sustain thee" is accepted by faith. The revival of individual faith means a new start in life and the comforting hope of a better day.

Faith in one's country make the patriot and the statesman. Faith in youth—the educator. Faith in the poor—the philanthropist. Faith in the oppressed—the emancipator. Faith in truth—the martyr. Faith in one's nobler self and destiny—the hero. Faith in God—the patriarch. Faith in the Redeemer of love—the Christion. Truly, Faith is the victory that overcomes the world.

Jesus possessed a wholesome faith and He shares it with His friends. Today, the Master's confidence and trust in the children of men remains unbroken. He believes in us. Do we reciprocate that faith? "Lord, increase our faith."

"Thou wilt my every want supply,
E'en to the end, whate'er befall.
Through life, in death, eternally,
Thou art my all."

LUTHERAN.

Luther Place Memorial Church At Thomas Circle

The Council and Congregation of this Church extends to the people of Washington a cordial invitation to worship with them tomorrow at 11 o'clock.

The services at that hour will constitute an epoch-marking event in the history not only of Lutheranism in the National Capital, but also in that of midsummer religious activities of all denominations.

Before the rites of the Holy Communion are administered a group of more than 70 new adult members will be received into church fellowship. This is the largest number of members ever received into church fellowship in a Lutheran church in Washington at a midsummer Communion.

Those who will join the church upon this occasion represent the States of Massachusetts, New York, Pennsylvania, Maryland, the District of Columbia, Tennessee, Kentucky, Colorado, Idaho, Virginia, North Carolina, Ohio, Illinois, Missouri, Iowa, Minnesota, Texas, Florida; and also the Philippines, Alaska, Austria, Germany, Norway and Sweden.

The great joy that the congregation has found in the ministrations of the new pastor, Dr. Carl C. Rasmussen, is being shared by hundreds of visitors from Sunday to Sunday, and it has been from the ranks of these visitors that these new members have come.

TREATY DELAY.

The question whether the Senate, as an equal partner of the Executive in the making of treaties, can be denied the right to possess all papers relating to the negotiation of a treaty, is a constitutional point that has become an issue between President Hoover and the Senate as a result of his refusal to submit certain papers to the Senate. It is very unfortunate that this issue should have developed, since it will delay a vote on the treaty and may even imperil its ratification.

Although President Hoover's sole purpose in refusing to submit the papers is to maintain amicable relations with other nations by preserving confidences, it is a serious question whether he should assume that the submission of the papers to the Senate would result in their being made public in debate or in the press. The customary practice is to transmit all papers called for, with the suggestion that they be held in confidence.

The President states that a number of senators have availed themselves of the opportunity to inspect the papers, with the understanding that they would not be revealed, and it is inferred that all senators may inspect them on that condition. The Senate, however, may not regard this arrangement as an acknowledgment of its constitutional right to possess the papers and to deal with them as it sees fit. When its rights have been in question the Senate has almost invariably asserted them.

Discussions in the Senate have made it clear that if the papers were transmitted in confidence they would be kept in confidence by order of the Senate. Whether they would not be divulged in spite of the injunction of secrecy is a question that can not be answered, but this question does not go to the heart of the issue that has been raised. The Senate's right to possess all papers pertaining to a treaty negotiation is the question at issue, not the question as to its disposition of the papers.

Several senators who favor the treaty are disinclined to vote for it until the Senate's right to possession of papers is asserted. They are suggesting that a vote be postponed. Inasmuch as it is difficult to hold a quorum, the possibility of postponement of a vote on ratification becomes apparent. Many senators who favor the treaty are absent, while all known opponents are present. The presence of a quorum depends upon the opponents of the treaty—a situation that makes it unfortunate that a constitutional issue should arise at this time.

MAIL ORDER PRICE CUTS.

Sears-Roebuck and Montgomery Ward have announced drastic price reductions, amounting to from 10 to 25 per cent on individual items. Montgomery Ward made the announcement in a letter directed to its 10,000,000 customers, while the Sears-Roebuck announcement was made in connection with a review of the forthcoming fall catalogue.

Price reduction on the part of the two largest mail order houses is of national significance. Together, these houses account for more than 1½ per cent of the total retail sales of the United States. Their purchases provide work for thousands of factory hands, raw material producers, transportation agencies, &c. If price reductions stimulate their businesses, the effect will be felt over a wide area. "Even a small upturn in demand," say officials of Montgomery Ward, "will start orders to factories, a decrease in unemployment and a general upward trend in business."

The numerous analyses of business during the period of semidepression that seems to be drawing to a close have remarked generally on the fact that the purchasing power of the American people has been little if any impaired as compared with previous periods. Generally speaking, the average American is receiving the same salary that he received prior to the stock market collapse, industrial securities are paying the same dividends, and the earnings of small businesses have been little affected. The fact that American buying power remains satisfactory should make the mail order price reductions doubly effective. The reductions should result in increased profits to the mail order houses while, at the same time, they provide a powerful stimulant to business generally.

UNCLE SAM'S SHARP BARGAIN.

Any study of District finances that does not take into consideration the enormous increase in water rates just imposed upon the residents of Washington would be palpably unfair. The rates just announced by the District Commissioners as a result of this year's appropriation act provide an increase of 36 per cent over water taxes now in effect. This radical increase is necessary only because the Federal Government takes water from the District system without paying for it.

The increased rate will provide capital for major improvements in the water system. Heretofore Congress has avoided making provision for a proportionate Federal share of the cost of operating the water system on the ground that Federal funds were used in part for the initial construction of the District's water plant. Now Congress has saddled water consumers of the District with the cost of both operation and extension of the water works. Yet Federal institutions will continue to use water without paying for it.

This method of imposing burdens upon the local taxpayers is an example of the unfairness of Congress. If Congress wishes to deal fairly with the District it will work out a plan for apportioning this expense equitably between the Federal and local governments.

ANOTHER FARM SURPLUS.

The Department of Agriculture mid-year crop report, issued as of July 1, shows that farmers have increased acreages planted to corn, oats, rye, rice, beans, cowpeas, potatoes, sweet potatoes, flax seed, broomcorn and sugar beets, while they have decreased acreages planted to wheat, barley, hay, peanuts and cotton. The combined acreage of the principal field crops, which is placed at 360,000,000 acres, shows an increase of slightly less than 1 per cent over the acreage of last year. Wheat acreage, while 4 per cent less than that of 1929, is 8 per cent greater than the five-year average. Corn will be the chief crop in 1930 with production estimated at 2,802,000,000 bushels as compared with the 2,614,000,000-bushel harvest of 1929. The wheat crop is forecast at 807,000,000 bushels as compared with 806,000,000 bushels harvested in 1929. If the estimated production of corn is realized, there will be a gain of 7 per cent over last year and 1.5 per cent over the five-year average. The wheat estimate is about 3 per cent below the five-year average and about equal to last year's harvest.

There was a time when this bumper harvest would have been looked upon with undisguised satisfaction. Wheat, corn and other crops produced of the soil represent wealth, and the larger the harvest the larger the material gain to the Nation. But of recent years the United States has been forced to a realization that the demand factor plays a dominant part in measuring the value of agricultural output. The United States has been producing more farm stuffs than it can consume or sell profitably in the world market. The farm problem is the child of overproduction. It became serious when, year after year, American farms produced crops as large as that which is estimated for 1930.

It is the Farm Board's appointed task to solve the farm problem. Solution depends upon stimulating increased consumption or influencing decreased production. It is generally agreed that there is no way in which consumption can be stimulated. The Farm Board early in its existence notified farmers that solution of their ills depended upon cooperative restriction of production—acreage curtailment—and it has steadily pursued a course calculated to drive home to agriculture the imperative need for restricting its output.

The 1930 crop estimate is discouraging, in that it forecasts an unsalable surplus. This year's crop will be no smaller than last year's, and last year's, although it was not the largest on record, was a climatic chapter in the long story of agricultural overproduction.

It should be remembered that advice to curtail acreage was not original with the Farm Board. For years, students of agricultural economics have warned farmers that the road of overproduction was beset with peril. For years, the farmer has been counseled to gauge his production to demand, as other producers must do. It was because the farmer failed to adjust output to demand that farm relief became a political problem.

The Farm Board was not created in time to influence the planting of the crop that is coming into harvest this year. The bumper crop does not reflect failure on the part of the board. But it does show that the tendency is not to limit production, and it testifies to the stubbornness of the conditions that stand in the way of farm prosperity.

WASHINGTON'S SAFETY RECORD.

Agitation for traffic regulation reform may be somewhat sobered by consideration of the safety record made by the District in the last six months. In the 52 weeks ended June 14, Washington had only 11.6 traffic fatalities per 100,000 population. No other city of more than 350,000 population had a record as good. For six consecutive months Washington has headed the traffic safety list with fewer deaths than any other city of comparable size.

The safety record testifies to the superiority of the local traffic code as well as to the efficiency of the police and the sense of personal responsibility of local motorists and pedestrians. It is an argument for retention of the present set of regulations, as a whole. But the fact can not be gainsaid that under the existing regulations traffic moves at a snail's pace. Because Washington is a relatively safe city from the traffic standpoint under the present regulations is not a valid reason for refusing to expedite traffic when it can be done with safety.

In revising traffic regulations the first consideration is that modification should not increase hazards. If it is possible to speed up traffic without endangering life and property, it should be done. Certainly higher speed could be permitted in certain streets, as, for example, Wisconsin avenue from Tenallytown to the District line, without creating additional hazards.

GASOLINE PRICE WAR.

The oil industry has contended for years that it does not attempt to fix prices. Individual units, it is said, ascertain their prices in accordance with production and transportation costs. But the public notices that in the summer the price of gasoline shoots skyward, despite the fact that the industry suffers from large overproduction. Supply, demand and production and transportation costs seem to cut no figure. The industry charges whatever the traffic will bear.

Out in California a gasoline price war is raging. Prices have been reduced to as low as 5 cents a gallon. A Federal probe is threatened, and the public, meanwhile, is storing away gasoline in tin cans, bathtubs and any other available receptacle.

Why was the gasoline price war started by California oil companies? Was it to benefit the consumer, or was it because one company undercut another or invaded its field? Price wars are always the offspring of price fixing. If the companies reduce prices when they begin to quarrel it is evident that they were in secret agreement as to prices before they quarreled.

A prompt and thorough investigation of gasoline combinations throughout the United States ought to be made by the Department of Justice.

LIGHTNING STRIKING AIRPLANES.

The Texas airplane crash in which five prominent Kansas City business men were killed revives the old question as to whether an airplane can be struck by a bolt of lightning. The plane had taken off from an Aransas Pass airport and had proceeded but a few miles when it disappeared into a black cloud. A few moments later it came crashing out of the cloud with one wing missing. Those persons who saw it fall assume that it had been struck by a bolt of lightning, but officials of the aviation field discount the theory, largely because the wreckage shows no sign of fire or explosion.

There never has been an authenticated instance of lightning striking a plane. In several wrecks the lightning theory was advanced, but generally the wreckage was in such a state as to make it impossible to determine the cause of the accident. Aviators are divided in opinion as to the peril of celestial electricity.

Aviation organizations should undertake an investigation of this matter. If planes are subject to lightning strokes means of insulating them possibly could be devised; or, at least, pilots could be instructed not to take off in the face of electrical disturbances.

CITY TRANSIT

From the Saturday Evening Post.

The cut-rate, or low rate, taxicab always appeals to the public; in the beginning, at least. It seems an expression of individual initiative and enterprise as against special privilege, monopoly and rates which are too high for many persons who would like to use individual transporthtion. But excessive competition in the taxicab business tends to become a mere racket, resulting not only in loss to the operators but in danger to the public and further complication of the already appalling problem of traffic congestion.

In all except cities of the first size, where subways and, perhaps, elevated lines are necessary, transportation is conducted by four agencies—street cars, buses, taxicabs and private automobiles. In the great majority of places the street car carries easily the bulk of the load; no other method is possible, because of the inherent lack of street room. A few years ago the operating company withdrew all street cars from a Middle Western city because of some altercation, but soon was begged to bring them back, so chaotic did conditions become. Buses, taxicabs and private automobiles are all important and desirable, but they are less essential than the street car or subway, where there is one, and city transit can not reach its proper goal until this fact is taken more fully into consideration by city planners and traffic experts. The automobile is justly popular, but it can not take the place of rail transit in the cities, and conditions will merely go from bad to worse until this simple fact is more widely recognized.

Just as the street railway deserves a living wage, so does the taxicab. Just as one is a proper subject of strict regulation by a utilities commission, so is the other. It is difficult to see how conditions can be anything but chaotic unless the numbers of taxicabs are regulated and unless reasonable fares, both maximum and minimum, are provided by public authority. It goes without saying, also, that a taxicab, like any other common carrier, should be properly bonded or insured, so as to be financially liable in case of accident. There are authorities who insist that the only correct solution is to give the street-railway system a monopoly of taxicabs as well as of buses; under public regulation, of course. A good many citizens might consider this going rather far on the road to monopoly. Without arguing the point, we can be sure, at least, that most cities require far more coordination of transit facilities than now exists.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST.

GENERAL L. R. GIGNILLIAT.

Never mind that name of his, pronounce it how you will.
Though you write him forty letters you may spell it wrongly still.
He has seen the smoke of battle, he has seen brave soldiers die,
And there's many a time they've caught him with a tear-drop in his eye,
For that heart of his is tender, and that dream of his is fine,
And you'll find his fame at Culver, not along the battle line.
Oh, his life is wrapped in boyhood, in their mischief in their play;
He welcomes them as youngsters and as men sends them away.
On his sleeves are stripes of service, there are ribbons on his breast,
But the glory of his record can not easily be guessed,
For his influence is marching in an endless line of youth
And his victories are many on the battlefield of truth.
Oh, I stood with him at Culver, and the mist was in his eye
As those manly youngsters passed him and he bade them all good-by.
And I thought some live in buildings which their skill and wealth have reared,
And some put words on paper, and their memories are revered;
Some find in wealth, brief splendor, but a matchless fame has he
Who gives his life to boyhood and the men those boys will be.

Another Letter From a Bald-Headed Dad to His Flapper Daughter.

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

MY Dear Louise:

Saturday morning you informed the household that another young gentleman had called you on the phone and asked for a date, and you seemed both puzzled and indignant when I suggested that a 17-year-old girl who has three dates in a week is crowding in two too many.

Don't misunderstand me. I have no objection to dates, nor have I any aversion to boys. You know from past experience that I have no old-fogy notions about shielding my daughter from designing creatures in pants.

When you were a little kid I taught you to believe that boys are just ordinary people, not worth getting excited about and not to be feared, and I encouraged you to be as friendly with them as you were with girls.

As a result you have developed into the kind of girl commonly called a "regular guy," and you mercifully escaped the boy-crazy period through which your sex commonly passes on the way to maturity.

Because you are at ease with boys and don't endow them with a goofy romantic halo, I don't at all object to your being with them.

During vacation here in the village, where everybody seems to belong to one family, you spend some time chatting with boys every time you go down town. You are out riding with one every evening—or every other evening—from dusk to supper time. And there's always one to walk home with you from church.

Under the circumstances you can't get old-maidish for lack of male society, and when in addition to these casual contacts you have one formal date each week and spend an entire evening here at home talking with some youngster, that's getting close to the limit.

I know there isn't much to do these long summer evenings, and the other girls have interests of their own that leave you without playfellows; but you mustn't form the habit of depending on boys for all of your good times.

It gets to be a habit, like going every night to the movies or leaving home every afternoon, and after a time you are miserable if you must depend on your own resources for a day.

It isn't boys I object to, or dates, but the habit of dependence.

You must learn to find contentment in yourself—in music or books or something you can enjoy alone—and use dates only to provide the spice of variety.

The most miserable people I know are those who have learned to depend on others to keep from being bored.

It's a dangerous habit. If you forget how to walk, what are you going to do when the car breaks down? Love, DAD.

THE ONCE OVER

By H. I. PHILLIPS.

THE OLD SWIMMIN' HOLE.

("Greenfield, Ind.—James Whitcomb Riley's old swimmin' hole has passed into oblivion, with the dedication of a modern bathing pool on the site."—News item.)

Oh! the old swimmin' hole! whare the crick so still and deep
Looked like a baby river that was layin' half asleep,
And the gurgle of the worter round the drift jest below
Sounded like the laugh of something we once't used to know
Before we could remember anything but the eyes
Of the angels lookin' out as we left Paradise.
Now I gaze at the spot and it makes me very glum,

Oh, it showed me a face in its warm sunny tide
That gazed back at me so gay and glorified;
It made me love myself as I leaped to caress
My shadder smilin' up at me with such tenderness—
But now marble baths shine with bright nickel showers,
And they've rules, regulations, too, an' set swimmin' hours!

Oh! the old swimmin' hole! In the long, hazy days,
When the humdrum of school made so many runaways,
How pleasant was the journey down the old dusty lane,
Where the tracks of our bare feet was printed so plain
You could tell by the dent of the heel and the sole
An' it's plastered with faucets readin' "hot" and "cold!"

Now no bulrushes grow and the cattails so tall
Are gone with shadders that fell over all
And the worter so mottled with amber and gold
Now gushes from pipes that some steamfitter sold;
At one end o' the place is a sign—man alive!—
That says in big letters to bathers, "Don't dive!"
And no glad lilies rock in the ripples that roll

Oh, the old swimmin' hole! When I looked at the place
I shuddered to think just what time could efface:
A great marble structure now stands on the spot
Whare the old divin' log lays sunk and forgot;
As I stray down the banks where the trees ust to be
There's nuthin' I see that's familiar to me,
And there's this thet jest clutches my heart by the roots—
When the kids now swim there they must wear bathin' suits!

Tammany Hall has given a flag pole to New York City in Union Square. Possibly so its indicted officials can now be taken care of as flag-pole sitters.

Helen is going back to King Carol. Well, here's hoping that she had him put whatever he promised in writing.

The whole Hunter family, including the mother, aged 62—and who has been practicing dance steps—is in vaudeville following that 24-days-in-the-air flight. It would appear that the audiences are now in for something of an endurance test.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Brother Edmonds Puzzled by Senator Kean's Figures on Bus Traffic.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your article of June 30, quoting Mr. Kean, of New Jersey, on interstate bus traffic, has just been called to my attention, and I find it difficult to accept some of the figures quoted in the next to the last paragraph. I will appreciate it if you will check these figures for me, as I want to use them in an article I am preparing on use of buses and trucks by railways.

The figures I refer to occur in the following sentence:

"In 1925 the passengers carried numbered 870,000,000, and in 1929 the number had increased to 1,793,000,000."

The figure for 1929 represents an average of 14 or 15 rides for every man, woman and child in the United States. Of course, some people take two such rides daily on city buses, but you were discussing interstate bus traffic; and I doubt that the city rides are enough to bring up the average so much for the country as a whole, even if city bus traffic be included. However, the figures don't seem to check with others in the same article. For instance, a few lines above it is stated that the number of bus miles, all common carriers, (evidently including city traffic) was 971,000,000 in 1925 and 1,760,000,000 in 1929. Comparing the bus miles with the number of passengers shows that in 1929 the average passenger haul was less than 1 mile—a comparison that looks like city bus traffic altogether. But gross revenue in 1929 was given as $366,000,000, or a little over 20 cents per passenger.

These comparisons leave me somewhat at sea, and I will appreciate it if you can provide transportation ashore. RICHARD W. EDMONDS.

Theodore Dreiser, Admirer of the Soviet, Denounces Americans as "Asses."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Several newspapers have recently published an interview with Theodore Dreiser, the novelist, in which he expressed, following a tour of the country, his complete disgust with the American people and their institutions, and asserted that the American people are "asses." These views being identical with those Dreiser has before expressed, it is safe to say that they were not picked up on his recent trip. There is some justification for the claim that some of the American people are "asses," in that they have bought enough of the literary output of Dreiser and similar authors to make them rich, and give them a prominence from the vantage point of which they defame their country and their countrymen for foreign favor.

It is well that readers of Dreiser's propaganda should understand the viewpoint of the author. American newspapers printed a few weeks ago dispatches from Moscow noting the presence there of Dreiser, and quoting interviews in the Moscow papers in which he denounced the American Government as an "oligarchy" and praised the Soviet system. Dreiser is a member of the John Reed Club, of New York, named for the American communist buried in Moscow with official communist honors. As such Dreiser some months ago wrote a letter read at a New York communist mass meeting in which he denounced the New York police and courts for arresting and convicting communist rioters.

It is not surprising that Dreiser, in view of his connections, should defame his country and his countrymen. It is, however, amazing that American newspapers are ready to broadcast such propaganda.

Mrs. Duncan U. Fletcher Protests Against Purported Message From Sir A. Conan Doyle—Believes He Will Communicate—Was Not a Recent Convert.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May I, as a reader of The Washington Post, protest against the article published in your paper on July 10 in regard to a purported message from Sir Arthur Conan Doyle?

As a friend and ardent admirer of Conan Doyle, I share with his other friends the belief that he will some day, under the right conditions, be able to demonstrate his strong personality from the dimension in which he now exists, as he did while on the mortal plane.

Notices like the one I deplore only serve to cast a stigma upon what is perhaps the greatest gift of Heaven—the knowledge that "there are no dead."

I also would like to correct the statement made repeatedly, that "Conan Doyle began the study of Spiritualism upon the death of his son." Conan Doyle began his investigations many years before that event, with the critical mind and cold eye of the medico, and it was his belief in the truth of the teachings of Spiritualism which helped to bridge that gulf and lighten the burden of that tragedy. A. L. FLETCHER.

Buchanan's Discussion of Authority of the Government to Coerce a State Ended With a Question Mark.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Post of July 4 has a letter praising Buchanan for his message to Congress, December, 1860, arguing, on legal and constitutional grounds, against secession. But another feature of that same message is Buchanan's masterly argument, also on legal and constitutional grounds, against the authority of the United States Government to coerce a State. He says, inter al.: "So far from this power having been delegated to Congress, it was expressly refused by the convention which framed the Constitution."

Buchanan thus appears to have discussed one phase of the old and interesting question. What will happen when an irresistible force meets an immovable object? and to have wound up with the old and interesting question mark. LLOYD T. EVERETT.

EVENTS OF INTEREST IN SOCIETY CIRCLES OF CAPITAL

Mrs. Alden's Cousin Bows Before Court

Miss Justine Townsend Has Been in Capital Frequently.

By JEAN ELIOT.

THINKING back a bit, it comes to mind that Miss Justine Van Rensselaer Townsend, of New York, who was presented at the Court of St. James this week in a group of American women, including two from Washington, Mrs. Roy Baker and Miss Lee Washington, has been a frequent visitor in the Capital. She is a cousin of Mrs. Charles Alden and has stayed with her here, as well as with Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Townsend, in days gone by.

A distant kinswoman of Mr. and Mrs. Townsend, Miss Townsend was the fiancee of their son, the late Lieut. Lawrence Townsend, jr., who died in the fall of 1918, having spent his strength in war service. Miss Townsend was the guest of Mrs. Alden, then Mrs. Theodore Boynton, here in post-war days, when Mrs. Boynton was chairman of the national committee for relief of Roumanian war orphans, and aided her cousin with the work.

Miss Townsend is the daughter of the late Mr. Stephen Van Rensselaer Townsend and her mother was one of the Virginia Kings. One the distaff side she is related to Mme. Waddington, born a King, who was the wife of a French Ambassador to Great Britain and whose memoirs, telling of her life in sundry foreign capitals, make the most fascinating reading. It is through the Van Rensselaers that Mrs. Alden and Miss Townsend claim kinship and Mrs. James Carroll Frazer, of Washington, who was Miss Elizabeth Van Rensselaer, is also her cousin.

Mr. and Mrs. Townsend expect to leave Washington on Monday for Schroon Lake in the Adirondacks, where they have a cottage, to remain for the next two months. Mrs. Townsend has but recently returned after spending several months traveling through the music centers of Europe rounding up artists for her series of morning musicales, which have become as well known and are as much enjoyed as New York's famous Bagby concerts.

Mr. William Phelps Eno Sails for Europe.

Mr. William Phelps Eno, who has been at his summer home at Saugatuck, Conn., sailed yesterday on the Ile de France for Europe to remain through the summer.

Mrs. Hollister Sturgis will sail for Europe on August 1 with Mrs. Crane Chadbourne. They will go to Geneva to attend the opium conference under the auspices of the League of Nations and propose to be absent only a month. Mrs. Sturgis and her family are now at Ridgley Manor, her country place in New York State.

Mr. and Mrs. Hawley To Leave for Home.

Representative Willis C. Hawley, of Oregon, and Mrs. Hawley will leave on Monday for Salem, Oreg., where they will pass the summer, returning here in December. They have had as guests this week their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth C. Hawley, and their son Billy, of Baltimore, who are returning home today. Their daughter, Mrs. Samuel Tuortellot, who has been visiting here for three weeks, returned early in the week to her home in Scituate, R. I.

Interest of the summer colony at Newport the last few days has centered about the flower show which has been in progress at the Casino. On the closing day on Thursday a great number of summer residents attended. Among them were Count Laszlo Szechenyi, Minister of Hungary, and Countess Szechenyi, who were there with Mrs. Vanderbilt; Mrs. Gibson Fahnestock and Mrs. Hugh D. Auchincloss, of Washington. The day was marked by the judging of several new classes and the award of Mrs. Auchincloss' trophy for the best arrangement of blue or purple flowers. It went to Mrs. Richard W. Corbin. Mrs. Auchincloss displayed in the garden class which was on the horseshoe plaza and included a large group of attractive exhibits.

Miss Nancy Newbold Visiting at Saranac.

Miss Nancy Newbold has gone to Saranac Inn, New York, where she will be the guest of Mrs. Jane Story, who with her daughter, Miss Jacquelin P. Story, is staying at the inn for the season.

She is making only a brief stay but will return later to Newport when various entertainments will be given in her honor.

Maj. Julian S. Hatcher, Ordnance Department, U. S. A., and Maj. J. K. Boles, F. A., of Washington, and Lieut. Sidney R. Hinds, of Fort Meade, Md., sailed yesterday on the Red Star liner Lapland for Europe.

TARDIEU WINS TEST AND CLOSES SESSION

PARLIAMENT IN TURMOIL

Paris, July 11 (A.P.).—Premier Tardieu's foes returned to the attack tonight and once more the spirited prime minister triumphed, routing the opposition for the fourth time in three days, on a vote of confidence that stood at 316 to 268. Having won the day M. Tardieu adjourned Parliament.

The session ended in a turmoil such as had marked it virtually since January. The prime minister, weary of facing repeated assaults, forestalled new ones by mounting the speaker's rostrum and exercising his irrevocable power of closing the session soon after 8 o'clock tonight.

The opposition, led by the Communists, with the Socialists and Radicals following, protested vehemently at what they declared to be premature closing of the regular term.

Challenge Finance Department.

Veering from the subject of the penalties imposed upon striking post-office workers which precipitated yesterday's crisis, the Radicals today challenged the department of finance and other subordinate administrative divisions of the government.

The issue came after a long discussion of a radical interpellation on the manner in which the government proposed to lighten what the opposition alleged to be an excessive financial burden upon the departments, cities and communes, a part of which it was held by the opposition the state ought to shoulder.

M. Tardieu accepted the battle as offered by his political antagonists, posing a question of confidence on their resolution.

Resolution Asks Reforms.

The resolution tersely invited the government to bring about the necessary reforms. The prime minister rejected it because it did not express confidence in the government.

The subject was cleverly chosen because it placed a large number of M. Tardieu's supporters in an embarrassing situation with reference to their rural constituencies which might expect to benefit from a reform such as demanded by the radicals.

The parliamentary session normally would have ended Saturday before the national holiday occurring July 14, Bastille day. Immediately after the vote was polled today the premier formally closed the regular session of Parliament with the reading of a decree.

Depositions Swell Steel Merger Record

Youngstown, Ohio, July 11 (A.P.).—Trial of the injunction suit to halt merger of the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. with Bethlehem Steel Corporation settled down to the dullness of depositions today before adjourning over the week-end.

Most of the depositions—read into the record by antimerger attorneys representing the Cyrus S. Eaton interests, concerned the stock transactions which took place during the spring proxy battle over the merger and were presented in an effort to show that much of the stock was illegally voted at the stockholders' meeting April 8, this year.

Hot Weather Drives Omaha Man to Suicide

Omaha, July 11 (A.P.).—John R. Ringwalt, 73, retired insurance man and father of Arthur Ringwalt, American vice consul at Shanghai, committed suicide today after informing his wife that he "couldn't stand another day of such weather."

Ringwalt, with a bullet through his heart and a revolver clutched in his hand, was found in the basement of his home by a son, Jack, who yesterday returned from the Missouri Valley tennis tournament at Des Moines with his bride of a week. Another son, Joseph, lives in New York.

Two Miners Die in Fire At Homestake Diggings

Lead, S. Dak., July 11 (A.P.).—Two miners were killed in a fire that destroyed three buildings at the Homestake Gold Mine last night. Scotty Easton and Sidney Wellman were the miners killed. They were trapped in the elevator cage when the engineer at the top of the shaft had to run from the flames.

The damage to the Homestake Mines was upward of $500,000. The mine, in the northern Black Hills, is the largest producer of gold in the United States.

Woman Attacked, Slain By Farm Hand in Texas

Shamrock, Tex., July 11 (A.P.).—Mrs. Henry Vaughan, 27, was criminally attacked and then killed by a Negro, on the Vaughan farm, 15 miles south of here today.

The Negro, Jesse Lee, said to have been employed on the farm, was arrested by the sheriff of Collingsworth County and rushed to Granite, Okla., for safe keeping. While there was considerable excitement, officers said they had the situation well in hand and were confident there would be no mob violence.

Behind the Screens

With NELSON B. BELL

HUNGRY representatives of various branches of the motion picture industry, radio and the motion picture and radio departments of the local press were festively feted and fed yesterday at a luncheon tossed in compliment to Will Osborne and his orchestra at the Mayflower.

Some doubt was engendered in the minds of a few of us as to precisely what course our sense of indebtedness for a thoroughly delightful occasion should take and to whom our thanks should be extended. Mr. Ewing, of the Warner publicity department, the ostensible host, arrived a half hour late, presumably upon the assumption that his responsibility had ended at the moment he wheedled station WMAL into shouldering the check in exchange for a 20-minute broadcast by Mr. Osborne and his boys between the salad and the peach meringue pie. They didn't have ice cream because it would have melted.

This was the first time I had ever been privileged to hear Mr. Osborne—several false starts having proved futile during his earlier local engagement—and I mean to say that when he croons, he croons. Of the numerous songs he purred into the far side of a microphone at the Mayflower I never heard a note, and I was a scant 10 feet from him, at that.

A little later at the Earle, where he embarked upon a return engagement at 1:20 to a packed house and tremendous applause, I had a very different experience on the receiving, instead of the sending, end of his activities, and I don't mind telling you that I enjoyed Mr. Osborne vastly more than I ever have Lehigh's little brother, Rudy Vallee. His singing is less stereotyped and there is more music in his voice. My only objection to his program—the same played at the luncheon, by the way—was that there was not enough of it.

Don't let this lad get away, as I did the first time.

A week ago today, there was printed in this spot—in the absence of anything else, following a holiday—a brief account of a Fourth of July afternoon spent out in the back yard with the flowers and the birds and the bees. A great many people seem to have read that particular column and a few of them have professed a rank and heretical skepticism as to the presence among the growing things of eight climbing roses.

As a matter of fact, there are ten climbing roses out there, but two species have been duplicated, so I only mentioned eight. For the benefit of those who do not believe it, as well as for those who have asked, they are: crimson rambler, pink rambler, American beauty climber, American pillar climber, Paul Scarlet, sweet brier, Dorothy Perkins and silver-moon.

And if I wanted to be snooty about it, I could mention that I forgot to list among those that had done their stuff and were through for the season the jonquils, honeysuckle, Japanese snowball and lilacs.

A pretty picture postcard from Rodney Collier, house manager at the Rialto Theater, brings tidings that he is in Montreal, by implication fortifying himself against the opening of the season—if any—on Ninth street!

And that reminds me of Universal and the fact that Nate Sauber, long the local branch film exchange manager for Papa Laemmle, has accepted a position with his old boss, Mr. Van Praag, an executive of Advance Trailers, and is to begin his new duties at once. Mr. Sauber, one of the veteran film men of the Capital, will be succeeded at Universal—or so I hear—by an out of town exchange man formerly identified with Pathe.

Mr. T. M. Smiley, an enthusiastic motion picture fan and friend of this palpitating palladium, writes in to suggest that:

"A Young Man from Wyoming," who knows "The Way of All Men," will find "Women Everywhere" admiring "Our Blushing Brides," "Inside the Lines" on "The Road to Paradise."

Of all things!

There has come to this desk a handsomely bound brochure in silver and black announcing the new season's product to be released by United Artists. This is one of the most attractive things of its kind I have seen, illustrated with a set of magnificent, full-page halftones of all the U. A. stars, which I shall certainly use for Sunday copy if I ever run short of art! My profound thanks to whoever sent it.

Don't forget, complete reviews of all the new bills in tomorrow's issue of The Sunday Post—not Monday's.

And we'll even let you see all the secret correspondence!

LOCOMOTIVE BLAST FATAL TO ENGINEER

Two Others of Train Crew Hurt Near Petersburg; May Recover.

DERAILED CARS BURNED

Petersburg, Va., July 11 (A.P.).—One trainman is dead and two others are seriously injured in a Petersburg hospital as the result of an explosion of a Seaboard Air Line express freight locomotive near here late today.

The dead: Engineer Fred D. Drewry, Raleigh, N. C.

The injured: Fireman S. S. Taylor, Middleton, N. C., both legs broken, body burns and scalds, and Brakeman S. S. Wiggins, address unknown, seriously burned and scalds. Hope is held by hospital attaches for the recovery of the injured men.

Drewry died two hours after the engine boiler exploded and ten cars of the northbound freight piled up at a Dinwiddie County crossing 1 mile south of here on the S. A. L. main line. Drewry, Wiggins and Taylor were in the engine cab when the blast came and were hurled clear of the wreckage. Sparks set fire to the derailed cars and flames enveloped several cars. Petersburg firemen were forced to resort to dynamite to scatter the burning mass, when it was found no water connections were available.

Two other members of the crew, Conductor S. S. Wheeler and Trainman E. P. Logan, both of Petersburg, in the caboose of the 50-car train, escaped injury.

Logan said he heard two explosions before the ten derailed cars plowed along the track for several hundred yards.

High pressure in the boiler was believed by surviving members of the crew to be responsible for the blast. An official investigation is planned.

Gasoline Prices Drop To Nothing in Seattle

Seattle, Wash., July 11 (A.P.).—Gasoline prices at one service station here dropped to nothing today when 5 gallons were given with every oil change.

Others were charging 5 cents, 3 cents of which represents the State tax. The general price was from 8½ to 9½ cents.

Health Better Than Riches
"Before I was married, my mother and sister and I did all the farming work on a 64-acre farm for eleven years. I married a farmer and now in addition to my housework and the care of my children I help him with the outside work on our farm. After my last child was born, I began to suffer as many women do. Our family doctor gave me medicine but no results. One day he told me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I did and now I am a new woman and I know that good health is better than riches."—Mrs. Clyde I. Sherman, R. #1, Lickdale, Pennsylvania.

DIAL FLASHES

By ROBERT D. HEINL

GOLF enthusiasts, racing fans and those interested in the international track meet will find plenty of entertainment to their liking in the program of local stations this afternoon.

The latest is that Amos 'n' Andy have found it impossible to broadcast tonight, being en route to Hollywood, but listeners might "check and double check" by tuning in at 6 p. m. The boys will be on the air as usual Monday night.

Radio is having a good effect on the speech and diction of congressmen and other representatives of the Nation, according to Ralph Edmunds, formerly manager of WRC, who now holds an important position with the National Broadcasting Co. in New York.

Mr. Edmunds said that since radio addresses have become a part of every important public official's job, elocutionists and voice teachers in Washington now list many prominent senators and congressmen among their pupils.

ERNEST R. REICHMANN, of Chicago, radio attorney, who frequently visited Washington, died suddenly following an operation in the Presbyterian Hospital in Chicago. Mr. Reichmann was associated with the former Senator James A. Reed, of Missouri, in the $30,000,000 suit filed in Kansas City by the Grigsby-Grunow Co., against the Radio Corporation of America.

He was attorney in the forthcoming case in the Supreme Court to test the constitutionality of the radio act. Also he was counsel for a group of independent manufacturers who were successful in forcing the R. C. A. to abandon the practice of requiring licensees to use their tubes.

Mr. Reichman, a founder of both the Radio Manufacturers and the Radio Protective Association, was 37 years old.

It may have sounded like the first college yell of the year when a New York elevator operator greeted a trio of passengers with "Ray! Ray! Ray!" the other evening. But he was merely calling the names of the three in turn, for they were Ray Kelly, Ray Knight and Ray Perkins.

SAM PICKARD, vice president of Columbia, turned up in Washington yesterday, chaperoned by a large Russian wolfhound, the gift of friends in Atlanta.

"Sporting one of these wolfhounds makes a big impression on the hotel clerks," Sam, who has been making a trip through the South, remarked. "They think you are a high-stepper and give you the best room in the house."

He traveled by auto and with a radio set installed in his car, listened to several stations en route.

Mr. Pickard met D. E. Kendrick, of WFIW, Hopkinsville, Ky., who told him that his station receives the most mail of any in the South, next to Old Man Henderson, at Shreveport. Mr. Kendrick said in an eight-month campaign 800,000 letters had been received.

To prove it Kendrick shipped Sam three barrels, containing just the envelopes of these letters.

Boys between 10 and 16 who can croon like Will Osborne and Rudy Vallee have a chance to win a contest being put on by Milton Baker, manager of WMAL, and carrying with it a radio and stage appearance.

OVER 100 productions have been heard since the first broadcast of the Showboat, which will soon celebrate its second year on the air.

The program, heard each Saturday night over WMAL, was inaugurated by Harry C. Browne, who portrays the genial Hank Simmons. Today Showboat presentations are carried by 49 stations.

Browne as Hank; Edith Thayer in the soubrette role of Jane McGrew; Elsie May Gordon as Maybelle, the heroine; and Lawrence Gratton, playing the villainous DeWitt Schuyler, have continued as leading performers. Behind their radio work are years of stage experience.

What Today Means to You

"CANCER."

IF July 12 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are 8 a. m. to 9:15 a. m., noon to 1 p. m. and 6 p. m. to 7:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 5 a. m. to 6:30 a. m. and 11 p. m. to midnight.

Astrological forces on this date are favorable in the morning and uncertain in the afternoon. Good news through a letter, and friendship received from an unexpected source. The day's profits depend a great deal on self; no ropes will be pulled for you.

The children born on this July 12 will be fond of study, and will be most honest and upwright. They will be mechanically inclined, and very neat and orderly in their work. They will pay much attention to personal appearances.

The two living forces in your life are your faith and hope. No matter how gloomy your todays may be, you always vizualize the sun shining on your tomorrows. You meet your calamities face to face, for the first time; they are never anticipated. You are one of the few fortunate people who are able to minimize your misfortunes, and to swell your fortunes. Others are usually much more concerned about your hard luck than you are yourself.

You have rather a pronounced economical strain, and as a result your "rainy days" are automatically cared for, in a material way. You have the art of spending wisely—you usually get your money's worth. You are never stingy, however, in your expenditures on other people. You have the usual caution of the Cancer people. You are content with your sure returns, no matter how small they may be; wild-cat schemes do not entice you. You are suited for a public or commercial life rather than one in the family. Family influence, however, will play an important part in your life—whether you wish it or not.

You are affectionate, but it is difficult for you to express your inner feelings, and you are often not given credit for being as kind and thoughtful as you really are. You feel more gratitude than you are able to express.

Successful people born July 12:
1—Clara Louise Kellogg—Soprano singer.
2—Irving T. Bush—president, Bush Terminal.
3—George Eastman—Kodak manufacturer.
4—Sir William Osler—Professor medicine, Johns Hopkins, 1889-1904.
5—Arthur Holbrook—physician
6—Lord Birkenhead—English politician.

Jane Interprets the MODE

Paris, July 11.

THERE are home artists and home artists—the dauby kind who gob everything up, and the clever kind who take one look in an interior decorator's window, figure out how this or that or the other thing is done, and then go home and do it for a tenth of the price.

Well, you can be the clever kind, and have a lot of fun besides! Because now is the time to make a new house for the winter—a bright and cheerful one, an artistic one, a happy one—all with paints and varnishes and enamels.

Any big paint store will tell you exactly how to use the things that they sell. Just take the time to discuss it with them, after you have decided what colors and what finishings you want to use. Then follow directions faithfully, and before you know it you'll have a new house.

• • • •

How about sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Dare Department of The Washington Post first for a leaflet entitled "Clever Fingers Dolls Up the House." It's a sort of a resume of house decorating hints that we have given you before, which tells you how to make a new finishing on old furniture with varnishing, how to enamel, how to polychrome plaster objects, how to make decorative book covers and cigarette boxes, in short, how to have a lot of fun this summer being an interior decorator in your own home!

• • • •

Don't the cunning ladies in the illustration look as though they were having a lot of fun with their paints? Well, they are!

• • • •

I know you're just dying to ask me if the women in Vienna were as beautiful as you always hear that they are! Well, they were. When a Viennese woman is beautiful, when a Viennese woman is charming, when a Viennese woman is elegant, all I can say is, And how!

Of course, all the lovely ladies are lovely the world over, and it isn't fair to say that any one woman of any nationality is more lovely than another. But there just seems to be more lovely women all in one place there.

There were two leaflets this week, you know, and you may send your stamped, self-addressed envelope for them if you get it off today, and them both. One was for colors for brunettes, you know, and the other was how to make a lot of cute togs for cute kiddies.

• • • •

Do you know why the summer sunshade has come back again to favor? Because it is becoming to the face!

How our grandmothers realized this! Wherever they went they took their little sunshades, which lent themselves to their caprices as the Spanish women's fans lend themselves to hers. Your modern miss does not coquette with her sunshade in quite the same way, but she finds it useful as a walking stick when closed, and flattering as a frame for her face and shoulders when open.

• • • •

Just gotta tell you how cleverly Schiaparelli can carry out the ensemble idea in the detail of a suit. Take a little salt and pepper—tweed, let this couturier make two snips and three stitches and you have a flared skirt and straight, rather short jacket.

The nicest detail about this particular ensemble was that a plain brown jersey yoke shaped in two scallops is worn on the top of the skirt, on the shoulders of the jacket, and again on the inner blouse, a peach silk, by the way. This yoke effect gives a most attractive movement (as the French say) to the whole costume.

Tomorrow again is the day for the weekly Dare fashion letter. You'll find it, you know, in The Sunday Washington Post.

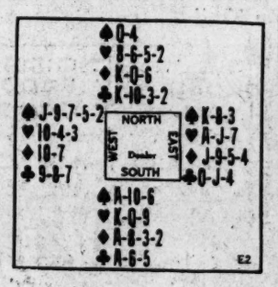
WORK ON BRIDGE



Summer bridgers, get this valuable free new, twelve-page booklet, "Correct Bridge Play," a vacation time Guide Book of Auction and Contract laws clearly explained in nontechnical language and illumined with graphic examples by Milton C. Work, the world's preeminent authority on Bridge and chairman of the rules committee of the American Bridge League. This booklet will decide all the moot points and many important conventions so frequently discussed at Bridge parties. It is yours with the compliments of The Washington Post upon request accompanied by a stamped, self-addressed, return envelope. Address Milton C. Work in care of The Washington Post.

(This article is intended for the Auction and Contract Bridge beginner.)

When playing No Trump and dummy holds King and one small, Queen and one small or Jack and one small, the honor generally is the play on a small card led initially; but this is not invariably the case. Suppose dummy (North) holds King-x and South Jack-x-x; if West leads low from Queen-Ten, dummy plays King, and East holds the Ace, the entire suit will be run by the adversaries; but if dummy plays a small card, there could be no distribution of the adverse honors which would enable the adversaries to take every trick.

With Queen and one in dummy, the Queen would be the play if closed hand had no card higher than the Ten or if closed hand had Ace and one or two smaller than the Ten; but in the following hand dummy's Spade Four would be the play if West led the Spade Five against South's No Trump contract.

If South's second Spade had been the Nine or a lower card instead of the Ten, the best chance for two tricks would have been to play the Queen from dummy, hoping that West had led from the King; but with South holding Ace-Ten and one small, two tricks in the suit are cinched if dummy plays small, and may not be made if dummy plays the Queen.

By playing out the above hand it will be noted that with the Queen played from dummy, the Declarer would make only one Spade trick; but with the small Spade played, two Spade tricks must be captured. Try the Spades as held by dummy and closed hand above against any combination of adverse Spades from which a Spade would be led (i. e., give West four or more Spades), and you will find that two tricks are insured by the small play.

The Tale of the Goofus Hunter

For years when hunting Goofus Deer
I tried approaching from the rear
Only to find that they would run
Before I even raised my gun.
I wondered what might be the reason,
I only found it out this season;—
It seems, while some hinds lack in foresight

ANSWERS TO INQUIRIES.

PLEASE tell me how much water to use to a pailful of well-rotted manure to make a reliable form of liquid fertilizer. Also is this a practical form of food to use for roses, phloxes and peonies? How much would you suggest for each plant?
MRS. A. S.

The best form of liquid plant food is made from cow manure—at the rate of 1 bushel to one-half barrel (25 gallons) of water. With this strength you run no danger of burning the roots; horse manure and sheep manure are also good, but they must be very weak (one-half bushel of the former and one-quarter of the latter to a half barrel of water) or they will injure the roots. Use a small cupful at a feeding. Liquid manure is a splendid plant food for all three of the varieties you mention. If, however, your peonies are subject to pernicious "bud rot," never use manure about their roots. In such a case it is better to use bonemeal.

Please tell me the name of the inclosed pieces of evergreen. S. P. K.

The twigs were a species of ground pine.

On the 1st of March I planted some snapdragon seed in a window box. Will they thrive in a box and when will they begin to grow? Please tell me how to care for a begonia which I have planted in a large flower pot. B. S.

Your seeds are evidently not going to germinate. Snapdragons can be grown in a window box. Keep the begonia in a place on your porch where it will receive the morning sun. Keep the roots quite moist and the surface soil in the pot quite loose.

Please tell me how to kill root aphids which have attacked my asters for the last few years.
MRS. W. F. C.

Early planting of asters is best, as the early plants are not subject to the dreaded aster disease nor to attacks of the aster beetle, which often destroy all the flowers of a late bed in a single day. As a rule a teaspoonful of paris green in the watering can, sprinkled on at night, will rid the plants of these unwelcome guests. Soaking the soil with Bordeaux mixture will usually kill root aphids. Some growers incorporate a dry form of Bordeaux mixture with the soil.

I have a pandanus plant with two sprouts growing out at the base of the plant. Can I break these off and plant them? If so, in what kind of soil must I plant them until after they are rooted? Please tell me when to prune a spirea Vanhouttei. Mine simply refuses to bloom. Please, if I am not asking more than my share of questions, tell me how to care for an amaryllis after it has finished blooming. MRS. I. T.

Break off sprouts from your pandanus and plant them in sand to root. Keep sand very moist. A spirea Vanhouttei requires very little pruning. This should be done after the bush has flowered. Try incorporating some bonemeal or well-rotted manure with the soil about the roots of the bush and keep it very well watered. After your amaryllis have bloomed the pots should be set aside until the bulbs again show signs of life, at which time they should be brought to the light. No repotting will be necessary at this stage of their existence, though an occasional watering with liquid cow manure will help to increase the size and beauty of the flowers. While they are growing give them a great deal of water.

Please tell me the name of the plant or shrub of which I am inclosing some leaves. It is crowding out my other plants. ALBERTA P.

Widening of Zones For Parking Urged

Traffic Director Aims to Protect Approaches to U. S. Buildings.

Extension of the downtown congested area so as to include the new Federal buildings within traffic restrictions applicable to the congested zone was approved yesterday by the District Commissioners on recommendation of William H. Harland, traffic director.

The change would include the area bounded by Tenth street, B street, Thirteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue and D street. This area would be added to the congested zone within which one-hour parking would be permitted.

This parking restriction, Mr. Harland said, is necessary to provide space for persons having business in the new Government buildings, of which the new Internal Revenue Building is the first to be put into use.

Law Action to Get Park Land Is Filed

Condemnation Is Asked of Area Needed for Rock Creek Development.

Condemnation proceedings to acquire 26 pieces of land necessary for the development of Rock Creek and Zoological Parks were filed in the District Supreme Court yesterday by the Department of Justice, acting through United States Attorney Leo A. Rover and Assistant United States Attorney General Henry H. Glassie.

The 26 segregated parcels in the case lie within the area necessary to connect the Zoological and Potomac Parks, and to prevent pollution of Rock Creek. The Rock Creek and Potomac Park Commission has been unable to purchase the property from the owners.

Justice Jennings Bailey directed that owners of the various parcels be notified to appear in court August 15 to show cause why the land should not be condemned.

Employes of the welfare office presented him with a bouquet, and heads of the various institutions under the jurisdiction of the Board of Public Welfare presented Mr. Wilson with an onyx desk set.

Wives of Tomorrow

By FRANCES M'DONALD

He Has Distinction—But!

DEAR MISS McDONALD: I have been going with a man for three years and in that time he has borrowed over $200 and has never even offered to pay it back. Of course, it was always in small sums of $10 or $20. At first I felt it did not matter, as I supposed we would soon marry and have one purse anyway. But the idea of marriage seems farthest from his thoughts. He has never told me what he makes, but he has been in the same place eight years and should have enough to manage on without borrowing. He has very extravagant tastes, can not stand cheap clothes. Would not eat at a lunch counter, and a lot of things like that. My brother does not like him, and mother wants me to give him up. Now, they do not know that he ever borrowed of me. Their objections are personal ones. Do you think he could possibly make me happy?

What attracts me about him is his superiority over the other men I have met around here. He has a little distinction about him. Also, he is immaculately groomed at all times and keeps people at a distance. I hate familiar people, and so does he. On some subjects he has very radical ideas. Marriage is one of them. He believes it is no one's business whether you go through a marriage ceremony, for instance. Yet he would not think of taking the liberties that a lot of men do take today. But he is very selfish. Last summer I fully expected that we would take our vacations at the same time. He evidently knew it and forestalled it by telling me that he would like to be able to spend his vacation with me, but could not afford to, as it would add considerably to his expenses to do so. I felt too cheap for words, and said I thought it best for us to get a rest from each other anway. I could have offered him money, but I was so disgusted I felt as if I never wanted to see his face again. However, I had a rotten time and missed him terribly.

When I got back I was fonder of him than ever. But when his vacation came he took a trip that cost $300. We could have had a gorgeous time up in the mountains for that, and a lot less. Ever since, I have felt a little different toward him. I even go out with other men now. He is sulky when I do and always stays away for awhile. And I must say I do not enjoy myself with any one else as I do with him. I like the way people look at him, and I like to look at him myself.

What I wonder is this: Do I despise him? Do I love him or what? Borrowing in itself would not bother me, as money to me is only a means of enjoyment and I enjoyed the money I loaned him, for it was spent on me in the end. He gets the very best seats, takes me to the very best places to eat, and all of that I greatly enjoy. So it was worth the money. What I resented was his trip last year. His willingness to spend on himself but not on me. He has never said that he loves me but he makes love to me in just the way I like—beautiful phrases, subtle ways. I hate the obvious. However, another man is very eager to marry me, and I just wonder what I ought to do. I am 30 and should do something soon, I suppose. The second man is the kind every one approves, substantial, dependable, a bit robust, but right attractive. How about it?

MADELON.

The longer you know this man the less you will care for him, and the older he grows the worse he will become. Some day science will be able to tell us what to feed this type in order to make them like other human beings. But at present all we can do is let them stay single, and be buried by the Elks.

Give him up altogether, even the $200. You say it was spent on you, and you are game to look at it in that light. Be game enough to forget it!

And be not misled by the fact that you missed this hero while on your vacation. That was only because you were having a dull time. The mountains usually are dull unless you take along your own party. If you had been having a normally good time, you would not have given him a thought.

Give the other man a chance. Be nice to him. Men need encouragement before they really show themselves at their best. But how they do thrive on smiles! Concentrate on this one, begin to really know him. The man every one approves usually has the qualities that make a man lovable. Ask him to get up a crowd to go along on the vacation this year and get some lively married couple to chaperone. I venture to guess it will be the end of all doubt and the beginning of the "happy ever after."

This column is for you! Your experiences, opinions and suggestions will help those in need of advice. You need not sign your name.

(Bureau of Home Economics.)

Cook together 1 cup of water, 1 cup of sugar, and one-eighth teaspoon of salt for about 10 minutes and add 2 tablespoons of butter. Wash, core and pare four large, tart, firm apples, and cut them crosswise into three or four thick slices. Place the apple rings in a single layer in a buttered shallow pan. Pour the hot syrup over the apple rings, cover, and cook slowly in a moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit) until the apples are tender. Remove the cover from the pan, continue to cook the apples until the sirup becomes thick and slightly browned, and turn the slices occasionally. Serve the glazed apple rings with hot roast pork or chill them with cold cuts.

How to Keep Well

By DR. W. A. EVANS

A MANY LINKED DISEASE.

FROM the public health standpoint, malaria is what is known as a many linked disease. The mosquito is one link; the susceptible man, another; the sick man, a third; the carrier, a fourth. In order that the disease shall continue to exist it must travel back and forth among these links. Break any link, and there is no continuity of the chain; the disease dies out. Time and again in the history of society malaria has died out of one country or another.

Various methods of breaking the chain by destroying one or more links have been put in operation. Among these are: Major drainage, minor drainage, oiling water, treating water with larvecides, killing mosquitoes that have recently fed, screening houses, curing the sick and treating the carriers. Each method accomplishes results. One method is best in one place or at one time. Another is better suited for other circumstances.

In Mississippi they are especially interested in screening of houses. They have invented a cheap, well built, durable, effective screen door, which they are having installed. This door is made with H-mesh galvanized iron screening. It is securely put together, and is so constructed that it is not easily broken nor perforated. It can be installed for $2 a door and $1 a window. The health inspector of a county makes the rounds in a summer season and secures orders for screen doors and windows. Later in the season he measures up the doors and windows, and orders doors and screens to be delivered after the crops have been gathered. He next visits the houses to see that the doors and windows are properly installed. Dr. Coogle says it is even more important that a door should be well hung than that it should be well made. The interior of the house is papered. The total cost of making a small house mosquito sproof—screen doors, windows and papered walls—is less than $10.

To prevent mosquitoes from coming through the fireplace they hang a bag of naphthalene in the chimney. The bag is made of cheese cloth. The naphthalene may be in flakes or in so-called moth balls. Mosquitoes will not come down a chimney which is filled with the emanations of naphthalene. Perhaps the same powder could be used in closed spaces against bedbugs, lice, and other insects as well as mosquitoes, fleas, and moths against which it is now employed.

So successful have these health officers been that in one county one-half the rural homes are now screened. A few other counties have records that approach those of Leflore, the banner county.

CROWDER, MARBERRY SEEK SIXTH STRAIGHT BOX VICTORIES TODAY

Manush, Hurt Found Slight, May Be in Nats' Line-Up.

Club Carries Brilliant Record Into West on Second Tour.

By FRANK H. YOUNG
(Staff Correspondent of The Post).

DETROIT, July 11.—The pace-setting Washington Ball Club opens its second Western invasion tomorrow with a double-header with Bucky Harris' Detroit Tigers, a team which the Nats have beaten in seven of their ten engagements to date.

Arriving here this morning, the Nats were greeted with the cheering news that Heinie Manush, injured in Boston, may possibly return to the line-up tomorrow and would play on Sunday for a certainty. Manush's injury, which was believed to be a strained muscle in his groin, was revealed as a minor wound in his leg, an old injury that had been reopened.

"General" Alvin Crowder and Fred Marberry are to draw the Washington pitching assignments and, judging from the manner in which both have been performing of late, the Nats have a fine chance of copping both games. Each of these flingers will be seeking his sixth successive victory.

Three double-headers are due on this swing around the Western part of the circuit, as two are listed against the Cleveland Indians, due to games which were rained out on the previous trip. These postponements appear to be a break for the Nationals in one respect, for their first invasion West netted but five triumphs in twelve starts, while the Washington baseball machine is now hitting on all cylinders.

Nats Have Won 20 of 24 Games Played.

Since returning home from their last jaunt through the "wild and wooly" Johnson's team has won 20 games of 24 played, including a streak of eight victories broken by a single loss, after which ten more successive wins were registered. Johnson has made but four changes in his starting pitchers over this period of more than three weeks, and in one of these cases the switch was made in the tenth inning merely to make way for a pinch hitter.

With the exception of Heinie Manush, who is nearly ready again, and Pitcher Adolph Liska, who reports that his sore salary wing will be normal in a day or so, the Nationals are ready for this trip. And, added to the fact that the men are physically fit, is the additional boon that all are chock full of confidence and have developed a winning spirit which should make them a mighty hard bunch to beat.

Pennant Hopes Now Rampant.

A week or so ago, pennant hopes with the Nats seemed to be regarded as one of those "secret sins," but all have come out in the open now, and to a man they admit that they and their team are good, and it will surprise many if they do not go out on the diamond and prove it. The Nationals were not taken seriously until they knocked off the Yankees so decisively just before leaving Washington. Now, it seems the whole baseball world has suddenly begun to sit up and take notice of them.

Although the Mackmen are right on the heels of Johnson's men, the latter seem to fear the Yankees more, believing that the Philadelphia pitching staff is too small to carry on successfully throughout the remainder of the season. Already Connie Mack has had to call on his regular starters frequently for relief roles, and, in turn, this wears them out. And, should the Athletics get poor pitching, their batting power is

On a warm afternoon last year Jack Dempsey bounced aboard a train at Manhattan Transfer, bound for Chicago to hang out his shingle as a promoter of prize fights at the Old Coliseum. He was laughing. "That guy Cole," Mr. Dempsey giggled, "he wants his $40,000 back. Mr. Cole is a marvel. He ain't real, but his money is. He pays me forty grand for an option on my services as promoter for a big New York fight club. He was going to build a house bigger than the Garden. Jack Fugazy was supposed to get up the plans. He moved into Fugazy's office for a while and then he said, 'This is a terrible dump for a big millionaire like me; people will think we're pikers if they ever see us in here.' So he said, 'Come, everybody; I'm going out and rent a big suite of offices in some big building.'

"Well," Mr. Dempsey went on, easing out of his tweed jacket and ringing for a table, with rummy in his soul, "we all got in the elevator and went down to Broadway and this Cole begins yelling and clapping his hand for taxicabs. A big cab hauled up; there was only six of us so we could have piled in, but Cole kept on hollering for more cabs, until he had three jammed up in the traffic together. He said nobody ought to ride more than two in a cab if they were connected with big millionaires, so we divided up and took all three cabs and went up to the General Motors Building to rent a suite.

Millionaires Were His Playmates.

"The manager started with some little offices, but Cole kept on telling him to show us something expensive as he was a big fellow and a millionaire and connected with the du Ponts of Delaware. He is all the time saying how he played with millionaires as a boy and practically never knew anybody but millionaires, so when the manager of the building finally showed us a peek at some offices of somebody big, I think the president or something of the General Motors, Cole got all excited and yelled, 'This is what we want for our proposition! Can we get these offices?' The manager said we could get some like them, but they would cost about $30,000 a year for rent because they seemed to occupy a whole side of the building, but Cole said money was no object with him, and he said, 'I want our offices fixed up just like these, with the same kind of high-class furniture and rugs and carved wooden walls.'

"The manager said, 'Well, it will cost about $60,000 to furnish the rooms and put in wooden panels like these,' and Cole got impatient and said, 'You didn't hear me ask anything about the price, did you?'

"That was only a couple of weeks back," Mr. Dempsey said.

He was now shuffling the cards.

"What are we playing for, a cent a point? And how about slams? Are we playing straight slams or do we want to unload cards as we get them?"

"Suit yourself," I said. "What about this Cole?"

"Oh, he's a guy of some book," Mr. Dempsey said. "He wasn't born. Somebody wrote him. Stick him and he'll bleed ink. A couple of weeks back he was renting a suite for $30,000 a year and $60,000 to furnish the rooms and then, day before yesterday, I got tired of waiting for him to get an arena for his club and the option was up on my services, so I said I was going to quit him and hustle some business myself. Then he began to yell for his 40 grand back because I didn't run any fights for him.

"So I said, 'You haven't got a fight club. You can't promote fights in the street.' Anyway, I said, business and the option was up so I'd have to get going. And that night strange guys began telephoning the hotel, threatening to take me for a ride if Cole didn't get his forty grand back. Afraid? What of? It was all legal. His option was up, I tell you. I was ready to make the matches if he had come up with an arena. But, thinking of how lawyers are and all, and not wanting to be stopped at Penn Station by some guy with a legal summons, I hopped into the tube and rode across the Jersey meadows to catch the train at the Transfer.

Never Saw Phony With So Much Money.

"I tell you," Mr. Dempsey said, "I never saw such a phony guy with so much real money. And the way he throws it around, it's a shame not to take it. I hope Fugazy gets a

Lucas Tight in Pinches As Reds Beat Phils, 5-3

Philadelphia, July 11 (A.P.).—Red Lucas pitched superbly in the tight places today and aided his own cause with a home run in the ninth inning to give the Cincinnati Reds a 5 to 3 victory over the Phillies in the opening game of their Eastern tour.

The Phillies had plenty of scoring chances but Lucas bore down each time he was in danger. Philadelphia scored twice in the first inning on three solid hits, a walk and a sacrifice, but they could not count again until the seventh when Davis put a home run into the left field bleachers.

The Reds cashed in on every opportunity. They counted three times in the fourth on doubles by Walker and Heilmann and singles by Stripp and Ford, then broke the 3-3 deadlock in the eighth on singles by Swanson and Cuccinello. Both starting pitchers lasted to the end, Lucas giving eight hits, while the Reds collected eleven off Earl Collard.

Caddy Positive of Victory For Jones in Today's Play

By DONOVAL DALE
(Caddy for Bobby Jones).
(As told to the Associated Press.)

INTERLACHEN, Minneapolis, Minn., July 11 (A.P.).—Bobby Jones ran into some tough breaks today and got a 73. Imagine calling a 73 a bad round. Most people would never stop talking if they made it—they make enough noise when they break a hundred.

Still, today's eighteen holes were the worst Jones has had since he came to Interlachen, including the practice rounds, when I carried his clubs, too. But Bobby—even if it is a 73—is entitled to a bad round. He'll make up for it Saturday. In fact, he will win—I feel as sure of that now as I did at the start.

Believes Bobby Will Smash Record.

Bobby shot the first nine in 34, two under par, but despite this good showing, better luck with his putter would have brought him even a lower score—probably a new first nine record, which I believe he will shoot before the tournament is over. His play up to the greens on the first half was about perfect—on the greens Old Lady Luck made faces. But 34 is nothing to kick about, Boy!

On the ninth Bobby came through with a shot that reminded me of skipping a rock down on the creek. Just when he was going to shoot his second over the lake somebody stepped up. Bobby turned back, then went up to shoot and he topped the ball somewhat and it hit the water with tremendous speed and skidded through the lily pads like nobody's business, landing up on the grass not far from the green. He used his spoon on this shot and he made the hole in four, one under par.

Again Uses 15 of 17 Clubs in Bag.

Again, Bobby used fifteen of his seventeen clubs today, and the same two got a rest, his No. 1 iron and the big niblick. Bobby had very little to say as he marched along. I don't understand how anybody can think easily with that gang watching. But he apparently isn't bothered and appeared ready to play more when he finished the eighteenth.

Bobby has been behind before—half of the tournament is yet to be played. I pitty Old Man Par for the rest of the way.

Chisox Trim Browns To Tie for Sixth Place

St. Louis, July 11 (A.P.).—The Chicago White Sox went into a tie for sixth place with St. Louis today by defeating the Browns, 5 to 3, behind steady pitching of Pat Caraway, who held the Browns to seven scattered blows.

Caraway was in danger only in the second inning, when the Browns bunched their blows to score three runs. Their efforts were powerless after that.

Tilden Gains Semifinals In Dutch Championships

Noordwijk-aan-Zee, Holland, July 11 (A.P.).—Bill Tilden entered the semifinals of the Dutch tennis championship today to the tune of his third love set victory in as many days. This time his luckless victim was Van der Feen, of Holland, who, like two of his countrymen before him, was unable to take a game from the American champion in three sets.

The other semifinalists in singles are Daniel Prenn, Germany; Hans Timmer, Holland; and Roderich Menzel, Czechoslovakia.

In the doubles semifinals, Tilden and Prenn defeated Menzel and Koopman, 6—2, 6—0, 6—0, their opponents for the title will be Timmer and Diemer Kool, of Holland.

Tigers Make 18 Hits To Trounce Indians

Detroit, July 11.—The Tigers went on a hitting spree today and whaled out eighteen safeties to win the series closer from Cleveland, 11 to 1.

Brown and Miller were the victims of the assault, while Waite Hoyt was holding the Tribesmen to seven safe bingles. The rampant Bengals hit Brown safely eight times in the first two innings, scoring three times in each.

GALLANT FOX PRIMED FOR $80,000 CLASSIC TODAY

Sande Pilots 3-Year-Old Champion

Gallant Knight West Threat; 70,000 May See Contest.

By CHARLES W. DUNKLEY.

ARLINGTON PARK, Chicago, July 11 (A.P.).—Gallant Fox, America's greatest race horse since Man o' War, winner of five of the Nation's outstanding stake races this season, will go after the richest purse of the year, the $80,000 Arlington Classic at Arlington Park tomorrow afternoon.

The 3-year-old son of the French stallion Sir Galahad III—Marguerite, owned by William Woodward, New York bank president, will go to the post the most solidly backed favorite in years and his odds at the time the bugle sounds tomorrow may be as low as 20 cents to $1 in the mutuel wagering.

Opposed to the superhorse of 1930 which has won the Wood Memorial, the Preakness, the Kentucky Derby, the Belmont Stakes and the Dwyer Stakes, all within the last 60 days, will be a field of ten other 3-year-olds. Six of them are sure starters, but four are listed as doubtful.

Gallant Knight West's Hope.

Racing against Gallant Fox will be the West's most dangerous threat, Gallant Knight, which finished second to the Fox in the Kentucky Derby; Ned O, third-place horse at Churchill Downs; three crack fillies, Snowflake, Alcibiades and Dustemall, all regarded as the best of their age and sex in the country; High Foot, Flaming Dark Entry, Cesare and Maya.

Owner Woodward and Trainer "Sunny Jim" Fitzsimmons announced tonight that Gallant Fox, whether a winner or a loser tomorrow, would remain over to race in the cup event.

Regardless of the weight or track conditions, Earl Sande, who has ridden Gallant Fox in all his victorious engagements, believes his horse will triumph easily tomorrow.

If the weather is fair tomorrow, the greatest crowd which ever saw a horse race in Chicago will throng the majestic Arlington Park, now rated as one of America's finest racing plants.

The guess on the attendance tonight is 50,000, with the possibilities that it may go to 60,000 or 70,000.

—Arlington Park Selections—

By J. B. SNODGRASS.

GALLANT FOX is picked to win the $80,000 Arlington Park feature today.

Eleven horses have been entered in the classic. The place seems to be a battle between Walter J. Salmon's Double Oaks winner, SNOW FLAKE, and GALLANT KNIGHT, with the chances favoring the filly for place, for she has shown a liking for a route. NED O won his first race in the West a few days ago, but that was on a muddy track, and the course is fast at this writing.

The race has aroused national interest, and Chicago will see today its largest racing crowd. The $10,000 bonus that GALLANT FOX will get if he wins the classic, will more than pay back the extra money, for his presence will draw many thousand dollars to Arlington Park that otherwise would not be attracted there.

FIRST RACE—A test at six furlongs. THAT'S IT should win, but will find PORTMANTEAU the contender. MAIDEN'S TRYST is another that is dangerous.

SECOND RACE—ESKIMO seems best in this race for 3-year-olds, with the fast PANSY WALKER as contender. COG-AIR is pretty sure to get in the money.

THIRD RACE—PANAZETTE, a fast H. P. Whitney filly, which won her first race in the West, should repeat in the third race, the Lassie Stakes, $5,000 added, and will defeat another sharp filly in Mrs. John D. Hertz's RISQUE. IN BETWEEN will be a close contender.

FOURTH RACE—GRACIOUS GIFT appears best in the fourth race, at one mile. CRYSTAL DOMINO won his last start, and may be very dangerous. EQUATION should show.

SIXTH RACE—PETEE WRACK, SUN BEAU and TORO, three foremost handicap horses, hook up in the sixth race at a mile and a furlong. PETEE WRACK is picked to win, but not with overconfidence, for he is not best on a fast track. SUN BEAU and TORO are well matched.

SEVENTH RACE—COMET may beat the platers in the seventh race. LOUISE WILSON and PRIDE are rated contenders.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DORIS JEAN, $49.52, $18.38, $7.86; SOARER, $12.50, $7.66; DRY DOCK, $4.52.

DORIS JEAN began well from outer position and, having good speed, forced the pace to the stretch turn then, coming strongly under hard urging, wore down SOARER and drew away in last seventy yards. SOARER took command at the start and opened up a safe lead to around the stretch turn and began to tire, but held on well in final issue to save the place. DRY DOCK was a factor on the outside, always close up to the pace and, continuing gamely under pressure, held his position safe. WATER PORT, shuffled back at start, came far back and closed immense gap. He probably was best. MOUTH PIECE tired.

SECOND RACE—About two miles. Purse, $2,000; claiming. The Blue Ridge Steeplechase. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start bad. Won easily; place, same. Went to post at 2:47. Off at 2:49½. Winner, H. B. Two-dollar mutuels paid—THE ACE II, $13.46, $4.32, $3.50; BOLD KNIGHT, $3.36, $2.88; BROWN STOUT, $2.48.

THE ACE II, well handled, and jumping fairly well, moved up to leaders fast after going half the route and, gaining on BROWN STOUT fast at the tenth fence, challenged and took the lead at the final turn of field and kept BOLD KNIGHT safe in stretch. BOLD KNIGHT only jumped fairly well, but was restrained to the final quarter, and came around at turn fast and over the last jump threatened THE ACE II, but was held safe by winner. BROWN STOUT jumped well and displayed good speed to the tenth fence, where he made bobble and tired thereafter. ASTRONOMY showed a good effort.

THIRD RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $1,600; allowances. The City of New York. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:21½. Off at 3:25½. Winner, Mrs. J. Two-dollar mutuels paid—OUTBOUND, $7.64, $2.82, $2.72; CHARMER, $2.28, $2.50; HYMAN, $2.50.

OUTBOUND, favored by inner position, had big saving of ground, began fast and forced the pace of DON ALVARO to the far turn, raced latter into defeat reaching stretch turn, took the lead, drew away strongly and easily kept CHARMER safe. CHARMER, always close up in pursuit of leaders, did not show his speed until OUTBOUND was clear, then gradually wore down the winner. HYMAN, outrun first half mile, came fast in final quarter and closed a big gap. PITTSBURGHER, also outrun early, got through on inside in the stretch. KNIGHT'S CALL began slow, but finished strong.

FOURTH RACE—One mile (from chute). Purse, $1,500; allowances. The Eleanor Bolling. For maiden, 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:53. Off at 3:55½. Two-dollar mutuels paid—STOP GAP, $32.44, $12.26, $8.64; WHO WIN, $11.16, $6.32; TENNESSEEAN, $5.02.

STOP GAP broke fast and went into command at once, set a good pace throughout while saving much ground, began tiring at last furlong and was momentarily headed by WHO WIN a sixteenth of the way, but came again, outfinishing WHO WIN in final strides. WHO WIN, far back the first half-mile, gained rapidly on outside threefurlongs later and, coming fast in the stretch, impeded DIODORO, challenged and headed STOP GAP, but weakened in final strides. TENNESSEEAN, off slowly and far back in early stages, closed an immense gap and nearly wore down the first two. DIODORO was forced wide when going strongly an eighth away, was sharply knocked back by WHO WIN. DARK MAGNE tired after three-quarters. CEZARION never threatened.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-quarter miles. Purse, $2,000. The Admiral Richard Byrd Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:22½. Off at 4:22½. † Two-dollar mutuels paid—ISLAM, $11.78, $5.26, $4.02; STARS AND BARS, $5.22, $3.38.

ISLAM, racing restrained for the first six furlongs, responded well when called upon and, coming fast on outside around the stretch turn, quickly got to STARS AND BARS, wore him down reaching the last eighth and drew out strongly near the end. STARS AND BARS showed rapid way, made his effort when selected and was closed in fast from PLUMBAGO entering the stretch, continued well, but was no match for the winner. DEVON, held to stretch, closed fast on outside and finished strongly. FAIR BALL displayed early speed, but tired in stretch. PLUMBAGO set early pace under subdued action and retired after 6-pole.

SIXTH RACE—Seven furlongs (from chute). Purse, $1,500; claiming. The Hampton Roads. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start bad. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:51. Off at 4:53. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BLACK FLIER, $12.38, $5.72, $3.94; BIG CHIEF, $8.00, $4.54; GOLD MINT, $4.18.

BLACK FLIER made fast move reaching the far turn from close-up position, heading DESTINY BAY into lead and, continuing well, held BIG CHIEF safe in long drive. BIG CHIEF closed a gap, reached contention entering stretch, challenged strongly, but could not overtake the winner, but held GOLD MINT safe. GOLD MINT came from far back, got through on inside in stretch and made a strong finish. SALONA lost ground racing wide, but showed a good effort.

MIKE CAREY broke forwardly quickly, raced into contention on outside and, after setting early pace, opened up a safe lead which he held to the stretch, tired in home run, but just kept MY SCOOP safe. MY SCOOP began slowly, was badly outrun first six furlongs, closed a wide gap in last quarter and, finishing fast, was wearing down winner. LOCKET kept close up with leaders on inside and held on well to end. SHADY REST closed some ground. PAGAN LADDIE had early speed, held on well to the stretch before being headed, but faltered in the final sixteenth.

SPECTACULAR, raced in first half-mile, went to outside at the far turn, made a strong rush entering the stretch, disposed of STICK AROUND and steadily wearing down MORSNUFF, overtook and outfinished latter in the final drive. MORSNUFF, never far out of it, began his rush approaching the stretch turn and drew into a winning lead, but weakened in the final furlong and could not withstand the winner at the end. CONSIDINE-MANGAN RETAIN D. C. DOUBLES TITLE

Team Defeats Gill-Smith In 3 Sets

Navy Pair Forced to Bow, 6-2, 7-5, 6-2, at Edgemoor.

Considine Will Battle Mitchell for Singles Title Today.

EXHIBITING championship caliber by constantly coming from behind, the doubles team of Bob Considine and Tom Mangan successfully defended their District of Columbia tennis title yesterday by defeating the challengers, Commander C. C. Gill and Lieut. G. S. Smith, in straight sets on the courts of the Edgemoor Club.

The scores were 6—2, 7—5, 6—2.

In every set but the last the holdover champions were forced to rally to overtake their opponents, with their comeback in the second set being one of the most remarkable in tournament history. Beaten in the first five games of the second set of the day and with set point in the making, Mangan staved off defeat by bringing the score to deuce when he returned Gill's serve out of his opponents' reach. Mangan and Considine then took the next two points for their first game victory of the set.

Title Holders Start Spurt.

It was here that the title holders started a spurt that carried them to victory in twelve straight games, enabling them to snatch victory from sure defeat in that set by a 7—5 score, and take five games in the finale before being stopped. With a 5—0 lead in the last set, Mangan and Considine eased up, and Gill and Smith took the next two games. A victory in the eighth game, however, brought victory to the champs.

Gill and Smith began the match in an apparently successful vein wher they captured the first game of the day. Their opponents took the next five, however, until Smith served four aces to capture the seventh game. Considine won his serve, however, to net the first victory.

Team Work Is Factor.

Both partners contributed to their second championship in as many years, with Mangin stroking wonderfully well without any errors, and Considine applying the finishing touches. In contrast, the work of the Gill-Smith duo was fraught with numerous errors and their performance was decidedly spotty.

The singles championship of the District between Bob Considine and Dooly Mitchell will be decided this afternoon at Edgemoor. A preliminary, starting at 2:30 o'clock, will bring together two professionals—a local chap against a player of national fame.

American Trackmen In England Weakened

London, July 11 (A.P.).—The combined track and field teams of Princeton and Cornell will go into action against Oxford and Cambridge tomorrow handicapped by loss of their respective captains, B. V. Hedges and C. L. Treman, it was learned tonight. Neither of them is in condition to participate.

Hedges, Princeton leader, was regarded as the most valuable member of the American squad. Starring in the high jump and hurdles, he was the leading individual performer in the meet between the English and American Universities in the United States last summer. Theman, a strong and versatile athlete, also will be sorely missed.

On the other hand the English standard-bearers likewise may be without the services of a leading light. P. M. N. Tisdall, hurdling star, has been ordered by his physician to take several months rest and is not expected to participate tomorrow.

Mandell Has Trouble Blocking Left Hooks

Orangeburg, N. Y., July 11 (A.P.).—Sammy Mandell, lightweight champion, entertained a distinguished gathering today with six fast rounds of boxing and five rounds of exercises. Frank Bruen, head of Madison Square Garden; Tony Canzoneri, Victorio Campolo and Jackie Kid Berg watched him drill for his 15-round title defense against Al Singer in the Yankee Stadium next Thursday night.

MANUSH MAY JOIN NATIONALS TODAY

Respect Slugging Of Yankees.

As to the Yankees, much respect is still held for their slugging ability by the Nats despite the fact that the Washington club has won nine of the eleven games played between these two teams to date. But, as the New Yorkers' mound staff is not particularly strong either and as these two teams appear to be the class of the remainder of the league, it easily can be seen just where the Nationals pick themselves to finish and why.

The season is comparatively young yet, however, and the Nats can not wish themselves first over the line, which means that they must keep on plugging and can not afford to let down even for a few days. It now is beginning to look as though Manager Johnson's hardest task will be to keep his men from getting too cocky and taking victories too much for granted before the games are actually played.

Manush Anxious To Play.

When Heinie Manush was shipped here from Boston Wednesday night it was thought that, while favoring his bruised left heel, he had pulled a tendon in the groin of his right leg, but the physician who is in charge of his case here declares that this was not the case. Manush had an old wound on his right leg which apparently was almost healed and it has been discovered that it was a slight infection from this which laid him low.

Ice pack treatments and rest were ordered and Manush reported today that he was feeling mighty close to normal. If it is left up to the player, he will be in action in the doubleheader against the Jungle Cats tomorrow, but the medicine man urges giving his injury another day's rest.

"We're going to win that pennant as sure as I'm a foot high," said Heinie today, "and I want to be out there doing my bit. Unless I have a setback or am absolutely ordered not to play, don't be surprised if you hear 'em announce Manush in that starting line-up tomorrow."

And, needless to say, Skipper Johnson hopes that Manush is correct in his diagnosis of his injury and will be able to play tomorrow. "Even if we have to hold him out a day longer, or even two, you have to give Heinie credit for the spirit he's showing," the Nat leader commented. "That's the kind of a player a manager loves to have on his team."

LEAD IN OPEN IS TAKEN BY H. SMITH

for those 60 and ties allowed to compete in the final half of the 72-hole grind tomorrow.

Eight Seasoned Pros Battling Jones.

It was still pretty much of a wide-open battle, too, with eight of the most seasoned professional favorites, along with the one and only Bobby Jones, bunched within five strokes of each. Any one of them has the chance to break through but on the basis of today's play, Jones and Smith loomed as the pair most likely to fight it out, with Cooper, Mac Smith, Armour, Farrell and Hagen still within easy gunshot of the lead, providing they can find the right touch.

Today's show was strictly a double-header, with the Armour-Mac Smith-Hagen half of the bill furnishing the early fireworks, sputtering out at the finish, as Jones and Horton Smith went out to put on the big thrill of the round.

Hagen looked like the Hagen of his championship days as he sailed out serenely in 35, 1 under par, catching both Armour and Smith at the twenty-seventh hole and starting back with all his shots apparently in splendid working order. "The Haig" hit the chutes on the fourteenth, 444 yards, where at least a dozen traps lurk in waiting for shots that stray off the line. After he had finished his battle with these bunkers, Hagen had a 6 on his card and a 5 on the par 4 fifteenth did him no particular good. He offset a birdie 3 on the sixteenth by going 1 over par on the tough 262-yard seventeenth and needed 40 strokes for his incoming nine.

Armour Falters on Last Nine.

Meanwhile, Armour, even par for twelve holes, suddenly absorbed a setback when he missed a putt of a few feet for a birdie 4 on the twelfth. This mistake upset the black Scot so much that he remarked to bystanders, "There goes my chance for the championship." That error alone was not sufficient cause for the remark, but when he took a 4, 6, 5 on the next three holes, dropping 4 strokes to par, Tommy's chances went sky high. He regained control to bag the last three in par figures, but the damage was done, and his total of 76 tumbled him out of the lead.

Mac Smith's putter cost him enough strokes to have at least enabled him to keep pace for the day with the American member of the Smith clan. Mac had no serious mistakes, but he missed 4 putts by the narrowest margins, besides playing the eighteenth timidly enough to force a 5, 1 over par, on his card of 75 that otherwise might well have been 71 or 72.

Jones and Horton Smith, because of the huge crowds following them, were late starting and continually delayed in their progress around the course. Smith caught Jones on the first hole and went into a 1-stroke lead on the second hole with a birdie 3. Both set a sensational pace and at the ninth they were all even, as Smith made the turn in 33, 3 under par, to Jones' 34.

Smith Has Eagle, Jones Birdie on Ninth.

This ninth was a thriller. Smith hit a great spoon second to within 20 feet of the pin and then sank the putt for an eagle three. Jones then came along and after a substantial delay, half-topped his second shot, a spoon. The ball headed for the big pond fronting the approach to the green, bounced off a collection of water lilies at the far edge and rolled up the fairway. As the crowd roared for this "break," Bobby capitalized by chipping dead and sinking the short one for a birdie four.

It was nip and tuck over the last nine, but Bobby found himself a lot more trouble than Horton, beginning with the eleventh. Horton got a birdie four on this, but Bobby, going for the pin, pulled his shot and landed in the rough. He was lucky to get a five and luckier to get another par five on the 530-yard twelfth, where he put his second in a big trap, came out too strong, ran his approach putt downhill 10 feet past the pin and then sank it.

Jones misjudged the 194-yard thirteen green, sending his ball bouncing over it into deep rough and barely extricating to the edge to get his four. Then came the hazardous fifteenth, after an easy par on the fourteenth, where Smith was forced to take a five. Bobby tried desperately on the last three holes to make up for his weird six on the fifteenth, but the best he could do was clip a single stroke from par. He missed putts by narrow margins on both the seventeenth and eighteenth.

Mrs. Thomas Breaks Record at Winchester

Special to The Washington Post.

Winchester, Va., July 11.—Mrs. B. O. Thomas, of the Catoctin Country Club, Frederick, Md., took a lot of lusty wallops at the women's record on the Winchester Golf Club course yesterday afternoon, when the teams from her club played a tie match with the locals. When Mrs. Thomas got through the old record had been buried to the tune of nine strokes. Mrs. S. O. Elting, who had held the record of 96, had clipped four strokes off with the 92 she brought in at the end of the first match, only to have Mrs. Thomas take her laurels away when the scores for the No. 2 women's were posted. Mrs. Thomas' new record is seven strokes over the par 80 for women and five under the next lowest score ever made on the course at its present length.

The Maryland women started off with a rush that made it look as if the Virginia women could not keep in the running, but the lower brackets came back with almost a clean sweep, and tied the play with 11 points for each team. Other Frederick players were Mrs. William C. Schreiber, Mrs. Philip Winebrenner, Mrs. E. P. Thomas, Mrs. F. E. Towne, Mrs. J. A. Long, Mrs. Richard Wallin and Mrs. George J. Ross. Playing for Winchester were Mrs. Elting, Mrs. W. H. Bosserman, Miss Fannie Page, Mrs. George E. Petley, Miss Brookie Kern, Mrs. Burr Harrison, Miss Mary Miller and Mrs. Paul Gaylord.

Berger and Fitzgerald Share Honors at Center

Forced to race three times before the faster man could be ascertained, honors in the feature event, 60-yard dash of the first weekly Central Community Center track meet held yesterday at the Central Stadium, finally went to Ralph Berger, who was adjudged to have beaten Jack Cumberland, his opponent, by fractions of an inch. Prior to the third attempt, the two lads had finished in dead heats.

Richard Fitzgerald shared honors with Berger for the day by winning all of the 70-pound events on the program, the 40 and 60 yard dashes and the broad jump. Another track meet will be held next Friday.

The results:

Singer Goes 7 Rounds; Down to Best Weight

Delaware Water Gap, Pa., July 11 (A.P.).—Seven rounds of boxing and a round of shadow boxing comprised Al Singer's workout today for his lightweight championship battle with Sammy Mandell at the Yankee Stadium next Thursday night.

Singer boxed three rounds with Marty Goldman, three with Billy McMahon and one with Jackie Schweitzer. After his workout he hopped on the scale which came to a stop at 134½ pounds, about what he expects to weigh when he faces Mandell.

Night Ball Threatens 2 Clubs in Piedmont

Greensboro, N. C., July 11 (A.P.).—The Greensboro Record says this afternoon that Henderson and Raleigh may be dropped from the Piedmont League because of their stand on night baseball.

The record quotes W. G. Bramham, president of the circuit, as saying these two clubs have refused to play night baseball away from home unless guaranteed $150 per game and that in his opinion the other teams will not agree to these terms. The Piedmont has an agreement whereby the home club receives all gate receipts.

Clubs at Winston-Salem, High Point, Durham and Greensboro have installed lighting equipment and several night games already have been played.

The Wonder Boys gained undisputed possession of first place in the French Insect League yesterday, winning their sixth straight game by beating the Samosets, 5 to 4. The Jack Hayes defeated the Langdons, 13 to 3, to tie for second place. The standings and yesterday's results follow:

Capital Public Parks Tennis Tournament Starts July 19

Entries for Men and Women Close Thursday; Winners Represent District in National Play Here Starting Aug. 18.

ENTRY blanks for the Washington Public Parks Tennis Association championships, the winners of which will represent this city in the eighth annual public parks national championships, are now available, according to Winfree Johnson, who stated all entries must be in his hands by 5 p. m. next Thursday.

Unusual interest is being manifest in the championships this year, in view of the fact that for the first time in history the national championships will be staged in Washington and that a championship for women will be included.

The Washington tournament will open on Saturday, July 19, with the national championships scheduled to begin almost a month later—August 18. The national doubles championship will begin on Wednesday, August 20.

The only two qualifications for entering the tournament as a representative of Washington is that the entrant be a bona-fide resident of the city or environs and must not be a member of any private club having tennis courts for the use of members. An entry fee of 50 cents and $1 for each event entered are the only fees.

Entry blanks may be obtained at the welfare booths located at the Henry, Monument, Potomac and Rock Creek Park Courts, or at room 1046, Navy Building, Seventeenth and B streets northwest.

Nine Clubs Compete In Canoe Regatta Today

A regatta in Yonkers tomorrow will keep the Canoe Club of that town from participating in the Washington Canoe Club's twenty-fifth annual regatta this afternoon, but nine clubs will compete for honors on a half-mile stretch of the Potomac. In addition to the hosting club, the Potomac Boat Club, Sycamore Island Club and Old Dominion Club—the local entrants—the following will enter teams: Cacawa Canoe Club, Tacony, Pa.; Philadelphia Canoe Club; Young Men's Association, Bristol, Pa.; Dundalk Canoe Club, Dundalk, Md., and the Tuscarora Canoe Club, Belleville, N. J.

The following events are listed, with the first scheduled to begin at 2:30 o'clock:

SENIORS—Double and single blade four-man teams; double and single blade tandems; double and single blade one-man canoes. Tilts.

JUNIORS—Double and single blade four-man teams; double and single blade tandems; double and single blade one-man canoes.

WON BY KNOCKOUT.

Benny Leonard was forced to knock out Freddy Welsh in 1917 to win the lightweight crown. He was able only to secure a nodecision bout with the champion.

DENIES 4-TITLE QUEST.

Bobby Jones, on his return to America with the two major British golf trophies, denied that he ever planned to win all four major golf titles the same year.

JAPAN-ITALY DIVIDE NET MATCHES

Share Singles Tests for Right to Meet U. S. Cup Team.

GENOA, July 11 (A.P.).—Japan and Italy broke even today in the opening matches of the European zone Davis Cup final for the right to oppose the United States. Georgio Destefani, of Italy, upset Yoshiro Ohta, 6—3, 6—4, 4—6, 6—4, but Takeichi Harada produced an even greater surprise by trimming Baron Humbert Demorpurgo, Italian ace, 6—4, 6—3, 7—5.

Harada's sensational straight-set defeat of Demorpurgo, rated as one of the world's ten best players, was entirely unexpected as the Trieste nobleman had been counted upon to come through with victories in both of his singles matches.

But Harada today was close to his form of 1926 when, playing in America, he was ranked third among United States players. Demorpurgo could make little headway against him.

Can Take Lead in Doubles Today.

The day's play left the chances of the two teams exactly where they were and great importance is attached to tomorrow's doubles match which will give one or the other the lead. Harada and Tamio Abe will represent Japan in doubles, while Italy will rely upon Demorpurgo and Pietro Gaslini.

In the final singles matches on Sunday Harada and Destefani, today's surprising winners, will meet, and Demorpurgo will play Ohta.

After the match it was announced that Demorpurgo, who played as if in pain, must undergo an operation for appendicitis soon.

Giants Sign Adams, Richmond U. Pitcher

Richmond, Va., July 11 (A.P.).—Johnny Adams, 20, whose pitching at the University of Richmond aroused interest of big league scouts this spring, has signed a contract with the New York Giants and will leave at midnight to join the team. Under the contract he will not be farmed out this year, but will take his chances in training camp next season.

They gave a new Thrill

THAT'S WHY THEY GOT THERE . . . SO QUICKLY

IT WAS JUST TWO YEARS AFTER HE SAW HIS FIRST RACE HORSE THAT SANDE WAS CROWNED "EARL" OF AMERICAN JOCKEYS.

LITTLE STORIES OF FAST SUCCESSES [NUMBER FIVE] EARL SANDE

The first race horse he ever saw was hitched to the tailboard of a prairie schooner. Two years later, every track in America resounded to that famous cry, "C'm on Sande!" He always gave the public the best run for its money.

That's the reason, too, for OLD GOLD'S quick success. OLD GOLD gives the public a run for its money. Made of nature-blessed tobaccos, it offers you the taste-thrill you've always longed for . . . it eliminates the throat-hack you've always hated.

Explain Sande or OLD GOLD? Sandes and OLD GOLDS are born . . . not made.

STOCK PRICES CLOSE IRREGULARLY LOWER

SALES UNUSUALLY DULL

New York, July 11 (A.P.).—Minus signs were again in vogue on the stock market today.

Leading shares lost 1 to 4 points net as traders took profits on the three-day advance. The decline was accelerated by the weakness of wheat, for the July quotation dropped to a new low for the year at 85¾ cents. Cotton was heavy and closed $1.15 to $1.80 a bale lower.

The bond market was strong. Utilities joined the rails in the advance, although trading was slightly less active than yesterday.

Efforts to mark stocks up at the opening drew a limited following from commission house customers. A score or more of 1,000 to 3,000 share blocks changed hands in the first half hour at rising prices, but the list soon began to wobble and before noon was fluctuating uncertainly in dull trading.

During the early afternoon quotations shaded off and the market gradually turned heavy, closing at the lowest of the day. Nevertheless, the selling was listless and the total transactions amounted to just over 1,500,000 shares, one of the smallest turnovers of the year.

Wheat Breaks Sharply.

The market was partially influenced by the movement of wheat, which was higher in the forenoon, only to break sharply later. Quiet closed 2 cents lower, up a cent from the bottom, and the other months showed roughly the same net loss.

Reports of rains in parts of Canada, and large receipts from the Southwestern harvest fields figured in the bearishness. Corn, on the other hand, was steady, closing fractionally higher.

Call money eased, dropping to 2 per cent from the renewal rate of 2½. Time funds were firm in a dull market and the current quotations are regarded as largely nominal. There was no change in the other forms of credit.

The week-end business reviews found that the first ten days of July had fulfilled earlier forecasts of the seasonal recession. Dun's commented on the results of the midyear inventories which reveal relatively moderate stocks of goods, "foreshadowing an ultimate resumption of buying on a large scale."

Bradstreet's said that except for the post-holiday rebound in steel operations, and increased activity in the production of radio products by the leading interest, "industry has perceptibly slowed down a longer than normal vacation period."

Export Copper at 11.80 Cents.

Copper for export was reduced, as expected, to 11.80 cents, bringing it in line with the domestic price of 11½. What little bullish sentiment there was received some encouragement from the decrease in the ratio of collateral borrowings to listed value of stocks but the effect of this improvement soon wore off as traders saw opportunities to take fairly fat profits on stocks bought at the bottom of the recent decline.

U. S. Steel crossed 160 before the reaction set in, but closed 2 points net lower at 157¾. A dozen important trading stocks, including General Motors, Standard Oil of New Jersey, General Electric, Du Pont, Woolworth, Auburn Auto, American Tobacco "B" and Houston Oil lost about a point. Norfolk & Western lost 4, Chesapeake & Ohio, Atchison and Brooklyn Union Gas 3 each, and American Telephone, Public Service of New Jersey, Consolidated Gas, Westinghouse Electric, Sears Roebuck and Air Reduction 2. American Can sagged more than a point.

Foreign Exchanges were irregular, featured by the firmness of the French franc and the weakness of the Spanish peseta; the latter broke about 20 points.

INVESTMENT BONDS CONTINUE TO CLIMB

FOREIGN SECTION ACTIVE

New York, July 11 (A.P.).—Prices of investment issues continued their upward climb in the listed bond market today, although some issues which have profited greatly from the demand this week failed to hold their gains. On the whole the advances and the activity were less than yesterday, the banner day since last March. Trading started at a brisk pace but slowed down during the afternoon.

The investment demand, however, continued for high-grade railroad, utility and foreign bonds, and the average for utility issues reached the highest point in three years. Stock privilege issues were hesitant after early strength and some recessions occurred as equity issues weakened. At the close convertible bonds were irregularly higher. Trading in United States Government bonds was dull and lower prices were the rule.

Bank and institutional buying held prime corporation issues on their upward course, although some declines followed early gains. Atchison general 4s touched a new high and then sold off ¼ in thin trading. Union Pacific refunding 4s, popular with banks and institutions, were strong, rising to a new 1930 high on a 1⅜-point gain. St. Louis-San Francisco, Pennsylvania and new Central issues were steady. A large inquiry developed for Big Four 4½s, Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis 4s and Southern Railway 4s.

A dozen or more rail issues established new high marks for the year. Among them were Chesapeake & Ohio 4½s, several Burlington issues, Elgin, Joliet & Eastern 5s, the new Great Northern 4½s, Illinois Central 5s, Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis 4s, New York Connecting Railway 5s and St. Louis & Southwestern 5s.

By and large the utilities as a group made the best showing of the day. American Telephone 5s, Brooklyn Union Gas 5s, Laclede Gas Light 5½s, and Public Service Electric & Gas 4½s were taken off the market at the highest prices of the year. Denver Gas & Electric 5s gained 2½ points on a small turnover.

Foreign government issues were well bought, and British 5½s, Canadian 5s, French 7s, Japan 6½s and Norway 6s sold at close to the highest levels of the year. Lautaro Nitrate warrant 6s soared 3½s points on reports that the Chilean senate had approved the nitrate combine. Buenos Aires 6½s advanced 5 points.

Liberty 4¼s to 4¼s was the most active United States Government issue and was steady. Liberty 3½s gained ⅛ of a point, while other issues eased in dull trading.

THE GIRL IN THE AIR - -

BY JULIE ANNE MOORE

CHAPTER TWENTY-EIGHT.

When the hum of Tolbert's motor had died out, Janet went inside.

The living room was deserted, but a light under the dining room door told her that some one was still up. It was her mother, clothed in a dressing gown and pretending to be interested in a book.

"Mud!" Janet cried in surprise; "your face is all flushed. Are you ill?" She went to her and touched her lips to her mother's forehead.

"It's too much heat, I guess," Mrs. Decker replied. "It simply isn't possible to regulate that furnace . . . I was afraid you wouldn't come home tonight, Janet. Didn't you plan to fly somewhere with Mr. Tolbert?"

"I didn't know when I left, Mud. I told Margaret to tell you not to worry if I didn't get back tonight. You know how quick they make up their minds out there . . . Mr. Tolbert had said something about flying to Boston, but I guess that's off now."

Mrs. Decker turned a page and, without raising her eyes, asked, "Has something happened?"

Janet wanted to laugh. Had something happened? If her mother could only know how much drama had been packed into the little while since she had gone off with Tolbert . . . But her mother needn't know. She had more than enough to worry about as it was . . . "Nothing out of the ordinary," she said casually. "But I'll probably have to go to the field early tomorrow whether we go to Boston or not . . . Aren't you sitting up unusually late, Mud?"

"Oh, I suppose so. But I wasn't sleepy, much, and I thought I'd read a while."

Janet guessed that her mother had been uneasy about her and had sat up in the hope that she would come in. These mothers! They have a mental telepathy code all their own.

"We'd both better be going to bed," Mrs. Decker said presently. "It's late." She got up, kissed Janet on the cheek, and started to her room. Then she stopped and turned back to Janet. "Margaret told me about Fred tonight," she said quietly. "She said you knew about it."

"Oh . . . !" said Janet, a little frightened. "Did you talk to her?"

"She didn't give me a chance. She said you'd already talked to her and before I could understand what it was all about, she'd promised to tell Fred he couldn't see her any more . . . Do you think that'll last?"

"I think," Janet declared positively, "that Margaret will live up to her word. She wouldn't have promised if she hadn't meant to do what she said . . . But you're tired, Mud. Go on to bed and we'll talk about it tomorrow or some time. Margaret's all right. She'll never do anything to make you ashamed of her."

Mrs. Decker started off once more. But at the door she faced about again. "I hope you're right," she said uncertainly; "but's she not like you, Janet. Outside of the time you quit the employment bureau without telling me, you never gave me a minute's worry. I always knew you'd do the right thing, somehow. But Margaret—she's another generation, Janet. . . ."

Lying on her little bed, Janet wondered what her mother had meant. She hadn't really meant what she'd said about Margaret. Tolbert? Had she subtly suggested that she was afraid Janet might be contemplating something not just right?

But that was foolishness. Her mother couldn't have known of Tolbert's affection for her. And, even if she had, was there anything wrong in it? Suppose she went so far as to marry Tolbert; would she have committed a sin? People would talk, of course; but let them talk. She had a right to live her own life, and if she choose to take a husband twice her age, that was her affair.

Not, of course, that she intended to marry Tolbert. . . . On the other hand, she hadn't decided not to, had she?

She rolled over on her side and stared at the black wall beyond. . . . Well, what about Tolbert? She couldn't just push him to one side and forget about him. He had asked her to marry him, and she had promised him an answer the next day . . . Tolbert! The president of the Great Eastern! Wealthy, socially prominent Tolbert! Dick's father! . . . He had asked her to be his wife.

What a scramble life was. For years and years—nobody. That's what she had been, just nobody . . . And then, a telephone call, and the lid was off. She was suddenly desirable. Men had made love to her; real men; men that amounted to something. They had made love to her; had proposed to her and——

But one of them had failed her. Was she to understand by Dick's behavior that he had never really loved her? That he had been infatuated with her only while Helen was away? . . . That was not a comforting thought. It left her afraid that the almost miraculous change in her life had been purely superficial; that what, being a woman, she so wanted to think of as a charm unsuspected prior to her departure from the employment bureau was, after all, but a surface attraction. . . . But she wouldn't believe that. Dick had been honest in his love. It had been Helen who changed him. Helen the magnificent. Helen the aristocrat. She had despised Janet from the first moment she saw her. Her Dick spurning her for the love of a common working girl? Preposterous! . . . And she had come back from Europe and made him see his error. She had cracked the whip and Dick had jumped back into the conventional ring to which he was destined.

Helen had beaten her. She had put the little stenographer in her place. She had saved Dick from the ignominy of an affair with a little nobody, and the name of Tolbert from virtual disgrace. That, Janet insisted to herself, was what Helen had done. The fine lady had succeeded. The little nobody would know better next time.

But would she? . . . Janet tossed about feverishly. . . . Would she know better next time? What if she accepted Tolbert; where would the clever Miss Helen Morgan be then? Tolbert would see that his wife was treated as his wife was entitled to be treated. And Helen Morgan would find that in spite of all that she had done, the little nobody had come out on top. If she married Tolbert . . . and Tolbert was hers if she wanted him. Tomorrow she would give him his answer. Tomorrow she would tell him . . . what?

Tolbert called for her next morning. The police had already telephoned. He had promised to have her at Mrs. Frenda's by 9:30. Was he interrupting her breakfast?

Watching him get in the car beside her, Janet tried to revive their our of the night before. She had been half afraid that he would, in broad daylight, be the old, dignified, rather stiff Tolbert. But he seemed strangely animated, youthful. It was more in his manner than his appearance. To look at him, he was the same Tolbert from whom she took dictation, the executive. But when he turned his blue eyes on her and spoke, it was the new Tolbert that she saw, or rather felt. He was adorable, and she wondered that she had ever stood in awe of him, as she most certainly had.

"We haven't much time," he said abruptly. "Are you quite clear as to what occurred last night? Clear enough, I mean, to tell your story to the police? They'll be painfully inquisitive, you know."

Janet shrugged prettily. "I'm afraid I'm not very clear about anything; but I went through one of these sessions a little while ago, so I know what to expect. I'll be able to answer their questions somehow. . . . I wonder if it'll do them any good. They can see now, it will prove just one thing, that Henry Frenda is innocent and should never have been arrested."

"He's never been charged with the crime, you know," Tolbert reminded her. "He's been held as a material witness."

"It's the same thing. He shouldn't have gone to jail in the first place and I hope they'll come to and see what idiots they've made of themselves. . . . Will they release Henry today?"

"I don't know," Tolbert replied. "But if you'd like, I'll see if I can't bring a little pressure to bear where it will do the most good. . . . Are you warm, dear?"

"I'm very comfortable, Richard," Janet smiled and let her shoulder lean lightly against his arm.

It was a glorious day, cold and clear, and the sun sparkled on the patches of snow scattered about the wooded hills on either side of the road. Janet resented the inevitable, sordid performance that was soon to spoil it. She had completely recovered from her shocking experience of the night before, and not even the memory of the spectacle of Crell's mutilated corpse could force its way into the rather agreeable and peaceful present.

"I suppose," she asked quietly, "that the Boston trip is off now, isn't it?"

"Not off," Tolbert told her. "It's imperative that I get to Boston before the end of the week. We'll see how this inquiry develops. If they don't require our presence tomorrow, we may fly up in the morning. It's unfortunate, however, that we could not have gone up for the stuff a day early as we did on the last trip."

Janet stared at him quizzically. "Stuff?" she repeated. "You don't mean that this is another shipment of——"

Tolbert nodded. "I won't frighten you by telling you how much; but we're moving it from a Boston bank to a bank in New York, and even though Belter and Crell are dead, I'm rather uneasy about it."

"But why do you have to go?"

"Because it's too much to ask of the regular pilots. They're willing enough, but, after all, it's my responsibility. . . . You might ask me why I don't postpone the shipment or refuse to handle it at all. But, you see, that's part of our business, Janet, and we either give service or lose what we've been many months in building up. . . . But there's no need to worry. After the bloodshed of the last few weeks, they'll probably think twice before starting more trouble. Moreover, they may know nothing about it."

"I wish," Janet said anxiously, "I could figure out the last line of the code in that book. It might tell us something worth knowing."

The session with the police was a more tedious affair than Janet had anticipated. It began immediately after their arrival at Mrs. Frenda's and continued throughout the morning, with the detectives swinging from one theory to another, asking a multitude of questions and seeming to never accept what they heard.

Janet told her story. She submitted to cross-examination at the hands of three different detectives at different times. Yes, she heard some one moving about in the dark room; knew, in fact, that behind the moving spotlight was the criminal. No, she did not see him. She saw a shadow, yes, as he was leaving, but it was only a shadow and gave no idea of size or form.

She heard Mrs. Frenda describe her hour of horror. She and Crell were sitting in the living room. The lights suddenly went out. Something grabbed her from behind. She smelled chloroform. Then nothing until she seemed to wake from a deep sleep. A flashlight was in her face. Then it flashed across the room and she saw Janet standing against the wall. She knew nothing of Crells fate until after Tolbert and his men arrived and turned on the lights.

At noon a short recess was declared and Janet was told that she would not be needed again until the inquest, probably three or four days. Tolbert was told to remain. Hugh Tempie was told that he might be needed to describe the men he saw while he was being held by the bandits.

As the sober group filed out of the house, Tolbert took Janet's arm and led her to one side. "You'd better go on in to the city," he told her. "I'll come to your home tonight, if I may."

"But I can't go in," Janet reminded him. "I haven't any transportation. I'll wait until they're through with you."

Tolbert grinned and pointed over her shoulder. "There comes a young man who will consider it a great privilege to take you in in my car," he assured her. "And you may look for me before 8:30."

Janet turned about slowly. Dick was approaching, smiling broadly. "Lo folks," he cried cheerily. "How's the inquisition?"

Tolbert said: "Will you take Miss Decker home in my car, Dick. They're through with her and I can't leave."

"Delighted," Dick declared, with a sharp glance at Janet.

Janet, dreading what she knew this experience must be, saw that there was nothing to do but go with him. Silently she crossed the yard and got into Tolbert's car.

GIRL AND ESCORT QUIZZED BY POLICE; NOT MISSING PAIR

Young, Light-Haired Woman Is Found to Be Resident of Capital.

POLICE IN RICHMOND SEEKING CLEW THERE

Heiress Said to Have Been Seen Near Alleged Abductor's Home.

Discovery of a fair-haired young woman and an escort in an automobile bearing Richmond license tags led local police to believe that Mary Frances McClenny, missing Richmond debutante, and her alleged abductor, Harry N. Dickinson, had been found. Subsequent investigation, however, revealed that it was a case of mistaken identity.

As the search for the missing girl was furthered in Goochland County, Va., where relatives of Dickinson live, an Associated Press dispatch from Russellville, Tenn., said that the missing man had not been divorced from his first wife. H. N. Dickinson, father of Harry, is quoted as saying that the son had not procured the divorce.

Mrs. Dickinson and her year-old son live on a farm near Russellville. The Dickinsons have been separated for several months. His wife lived with him in Richmond, Va., until the time of their separation.

Trailed Into Park.

Richmond authorities focussed their attention on Washington yesterday when it was learned that a young woman, resembling the missing girl had been taken into custody in Potomac Park with her escort. Detective Sergts. William Messer and Chester C. Stepp made the arrests on information received at headquarters that a girl who answered the description of the missing girl had breakfasted in a lunchroom near the Navy Department.

Stepp and Messer visited the lunchroom and learned the couple had left. They toured the neighborhood and found the couple. Both vigorously denied any connection with the McClenny case. The girl gave her name as Mary E. Connor, of Pennsylvania avenue near Twenty-first street northwest. Her companion was August F. Pohlig, 45 years old, of First near I street northwest.

Couple Not Held.

Careful check of the description showed a general resemblance of Miss Connor to the missing girl, but there were several discrepancies. Their identities were established and they were released.

Investigators in Richmond yesterday were trying to elicit information from H. W. Dickinson, brother of the missing man, who is held on a warrant charging him with aiding and abetting an abduction. John S. Leadbetter, an employe at the same filling station where Harry Dickinson worked, is charged with secreting the girl.

Private detectives engaged in the search said that the girl had been seen in Goochland County, near Sabot, at the home of Dickinson's sister.

Meanwhile, the parents of Miss McClenny told police in Richmond that they had found in their home the suitcase which they at first believed their daughter had taken, adding another link to the chain being made by police in their belief that she was abducted.

GOLD-PLATED TAGS GIVEN TO HOOVER'S DOGS

Underwood & Underwood.

The first dogs of the Nation yesterday received their 1930-1931 license tags from Chatham Towers, collector of taxes for the District. Each tag is gold-plated and has its owner's name engraved on it. Mr. Towers is shown attaching a tag to Mark, the President's English setter.

YORK MURDER CASE TESTIMONY CLOSES

Trial Is Expected to Reach Jury on Monday After Closing Argument.

GUY REPEATS CHARGES

Testimony in the trial of three Negroes accused of murdering Prohibition Agent Lamar Watson York was completed in Criminal Division No. 1 Court yesterday, and the case will go to the jury Monday afternoon, following arguments by defense and prosecution attorneys.

Milton Guy, indicted for first degree murder with John Logan and John Borum, followed his codefendants to the stand yesterday. He reiterated his charge that Borum fired the shot that killed the officer, and denied ownership of the pistol used in the murder. Earlier in the trial Borum had accused Guy of the murder, and Logan had accused Borum.

After Guy's wife had testified that her husband had never had a gun in his home, Justice Jesse C. Adkins ordered a recess until 10 o'clock Monday morning, when arguments will open.

Attorneys for both sides will meet with the justice this morning to discuss legal points of the charge to the jury.

Two Gaming Raids Net Five Arrests

New Leader of Vice Squad Makes First Forays After Taking Post.

As his first action upon taking command of the Police Vice Squad as successor to Sergt. Oscar J. Letterman, Sergt. John R. Leach yesterday led two raids which resulted in arrest of five men on charges of permitting gaming.

A raid on a newsstand at Seventh street and Pennsylvania avenue netted Lorenzo Tanner, 22 years old, of 815 Second street southwest, and Henry Mahoney, 23 years old, of 822 Second street southwest, both colored. At 926 Louisiana avenue the vice squad arrested Pete Manho, 48 years old, of 730 Sixth street southwest; Peter Poulos, 38 years old, of 416 Pennsylvania avenue northwest, and John Drosso, 20 years old, of 53 K street northwest.

Detective F. A. Truscott and Policemen James A. Mostyn and C. L. Van Meter, all three of whom served under Sergt. Letterman before his recent elevation to lieutenancy, were the other members of the vice squad who accompanied their new chief on his initial raids.

Patron of Speakeasy Says Pair Stole Watch

Charged with possessing whisky, and "rolling" a patron of their Southeast speakeasy, Joseph Warren and Lewis Thomas, both colored, were held for jury trial in Police Court yesterday. The robbery charge was dismissed.

Charges were brought against the men by Ammon Tate, of Sixteenth street near East Capitol street, who said that he lost his watch while dozing in a "joint" allegedly operated by the defendants. He summoned Policeman William B. Satterthwaite, who raided the place single-handed.

Government Faces Suit For $3,764 Rent Fee

Charging the United States Government with failure to pay rent for the Bieber Building, 1358 B street southwest, from February 1, 1930, until February 24, when the property was sold, Margaret B. Smith yesterday filed suit in the District Supreme Court for $3,764.88.

Through Attorneys Daniel Thew Wright and Douglas, Obear & Douglas, the plaintiff claims that she contracted with the United States for the sale of the property at $642,000, with the understanding that taxes and rentals were to be adjusted to the date of settlement. She charges that the Government failed to pay either taxes or rentals from February 24 until the date when the sale was consummated.

Increased Pensions Set For Oldest Annuitants

The oldest annuitants on the civil service pension list will receive notices within the next few days telling them how much they will receive monthly hereafter under the new retirement law, and their increased annuities will start as of August 1.

Thousands of others on the pension rolls, however, must wait much longer before receiving their increases, although six temporary employes have been added by the retirement division of the Pension Office to handle the extra work. It is expected that by August 1 there will be 25 such additional employes.

Hoover's Wolf Hound Gets Number One Tag

Padrick, Irish wolf hound of the White House, is No. 1 dog in this man's country.

Whether he can or would lick any other dog in the White House kennels has not been demonstrated, but Chatham M. Towers, District tax collector and custodian of dog taxes, gave Padrick his indisputable rank yesterday when he took to President Hoover tags for each of his dogs. Tag No. 1 was put on Padrick by Mr. Towers himself apparently after consulting with Padrick's master.

Gillette, a Gordon setter, was given tag No. 2; Mark, an English setter, tag No. 3; Pat, a German shepherd, tag No. 4, and Big Boy, wire-haired fox terrier, was given tag No. 5. White House dogs receive their tags free.

FALL BRINGS DEATH TO BRIDGE WORKER

RECENT ARRIVAL HERE

Losing his balance while he was being hoisted to the draw section of the Arlington Memorial Bridge, on which he was employed as an apprentice bridgeman by the Phoenix Bridge Co., Albert Canter, 31 years old, of 321 East Capitol street, plunged 30 feet to a barge to receive fatal injuries yesterday morning.

He died late in the afternoon at Casualty Hospital, where he was found to have a crushed skull, fracture of the pelvis and of both legs and internal injuries.

The accident occurred in view of many workmen on the structure and others on the barge, where Canter had been directing the removal of iron ore. He swung on the scoop of the derrick for a short ride to another position on the bridge. When he was raised to a 30-foot elevation, the shovel-like container suddenly tilted. Canter made a frantic reach for the iron chain to steady himself, but the lurch had been too forceful and he went tumbling over the side and to the top of the barge.

Dr. A. H. Pike, a physician of the bridge company, rendered first aid, but the seriousness of Canter's condition precluded any possibility of saving his life.

Canter came to Washington recently from New Hampshire.

House With Doors, Steps Of Capitol to Be Razed

Doors and steps declared to have been appropriated from the Capitol for his private use by a former Capitol employe will pass from service after 64 years of usage when the building at 136 East Capitol street is razed in the next few days to make way for the new Supreme Court Building.

According to William E. Newman, of 912 Maryland avenue northeast, William Tudge, who built the house in 1866 while he was custodian of supplies at the Capitol, later was discharged for having taken the doors and steps for his new home from the supplies entrusted to his care.

Suit for $10,000 Filed In Employe's Injury

Suit for $10,000 was filed against the Park Transfer Co. in the District Supreme Court yesterday by Steven & Son Co., which alleges that one of its employes, Charles Roberts, was injured August 26, 1929, as the result of negligence on the part of the defendant company.

Because of the compensation laws, the plaintiff contends, it was necessary for the Steven & Son Co. to pay $164.85 for Roberts' hospital and doctor's bill and to give him $280.82 salary during his convalescence.

STRKIE OF LATHERS MAY BE ENDED SOON

Compromise Move Gives Hope That Controversy Will Be Over Monday.

$1 RAISE IS PROBABLE

Excellent prospects were reported yesterday in the building trades here for termination of the lathers' strike by Monday.

That either side will be able to chalk up a victory to its credit, however, is considered extremely doubtful. Although final adjustment will be mutually satisfactory, employing contractors and union workers both will have to concede much.

Both sides have agreed to continue arbitration, however, but officials of the Employing Plasterers Association have voted definitely to reject the union's demand for an increase in wages from $12 to $14 a day.

Just what the terms of the apparently impending settlement will be is not definite as yet, although the probability appears that on paragraph in the new agreement will provide for an increase of $1 per day.

Meanwhile the strike is holding up construction of several new large buildings in the District, although it is reported that in at least one instance union carpenters, out of work for some time because of industrial depression, are being employed to replace striking lathers.

Union officials say that they will not tolerate replacement of striking lathers with nonunion help, should the present negotiations fail; but, on the other hand, employing contractors insist that they have no intntion of employing any other than union labor.

Woman Cut and Bruised By Walking Into Car

Knocked to the pavement at Eleventh and G streets northwest when she was said to have walked into the side of an automobile, Mrs. Emma V. Triepel, 63 years old, of 3439 Mount Pleasant street northwest, suffered lacerations of the forehead and abrasions of the right leg yesterday afternoon.

She was treated at Casualty Hospital. The car, according to First Precinct police, was operated by Frank F. Clarkson, of Rhode Island avenue near Fifteenth street northeast.

Two Dog-Biting Cases Result in Minor Hurts

Two dog-biting cases, both of minor importance, were reported yesterday to Third Precinct police. While sleeping early yesterday at the home of Mrs. Carrol Siamons, 1724 Seventeenth street northwest, Miss Marline Snyder was bitten on the left foot by a dog owned by her hostess.

Suit for $52,200 Filed Against Brother's Estate

Claiming that his late brother owed him $52,200, Harry J. McInnis yesterday filed suit for that amount in the District Supreme Court against Michael M. Doyle, executor under his brother's will.

The suit alleges that Thomas C. McInnis, the deceased brother, owned the Page Laundry Co. and property valued in excess of $400,000. The plaintiff claims that his brother had borrowed sums from him to buy out the business. The plaintiff is represented by Attorneys Wilton J. Lambert, R. H. Yeatman and George D. Horning, jr.

Police Detain Driver As Auto Victim Dies

An inquest will be held today in the death of Benjamin E. Marshall, 27 years old, of 33 T street northwest, who succumbed on Thursday to injuries received in an automobile collision on June 6 at Second street and Massachusetts avenue northwest.

Putnam Rogers, 23 years old, of 154 T street northeast, driver of the other automobile involved, is held at the Ninth Precinct pending the inquest. Marshall was a truck driver for the Continental Baking Co.

Sea Scouts Call on Hoover.

Twenty-four Sea Scouts of New Jersey were presented to President Hoover yesterday at 12:30 noon. The scouts have been visiting the city for the past week. They made the trip here in their 60-foot schooner, the Ballantre, which is under command of Capt. H. Powell. Immediately after their presentation to the President, the scouts left on their ship for Annapolis.

ARMY MIMIC WAR BADLY DISRUPTED BY MARYLAND COW

COMMUNICATIONS CUT BY HEARTY APPETITE

Chewing a field telephone wire that was laid by defensive troops at Fort George G. Meade, Md., a cow yesterday disrupted the war game that is now in progress at the C. M. T. C. center.

The cow, a Maryland one of Jersey breed, interfered with a great experiment of the War Department, it was reported, because this was believed to be the first time that R. O. T. C. and C. M. T. C. students have laid wire for organized unit of the United States Army. The wire was laid for the Eightieth Organized Reserve Division. Miles of the wire had been laid from Fort George G. Meade to the various command posts in the field.

New Wire Put Up.

When the time came to test the telephone system, it would not work. Finally, it was discovered that a cow had chewed the bright yellow-covered wire at a point one mile southeast of Ardwick, Md. New wire was strung so that the war game could go on. This time the wire was strung on tree tops out of reach of cows.

The telephone system is to be used by the Blue forces in an effort to block the invasion of the Reds in the war game which is reaching alarming proportions, it was reported.

First Parade Held.

At Fort Myer, Va., the first parade was held yesterday afternoon, 280 students from Washington and Baltimore taking part. The two squadrons of Washington and Baltimore men were commanded by officers of the 306th Cavalry. Boxing bouts were held last night.

Announcement came from Fort Eustis, Va., that Capt. Theodore C. C. Fong and First Lieut. Addison M. Duval, of the staff of St. Elizabeth's Hospital, Washington, have been attached to the infirmary of the Citizens' Military Training Camp there as Medical Reserve officers. This is Capt. Darr Urges Fight For District Vote

Stressing the need for Washington youths to be fired with an interest for national representation for the District, Charles W. Darr, president of the Washington Chamber of Commerce, addressed the Junior Citizens Alliance last night at a meeting in the Chamber of Commerce offices.

"This is a young man's age," he declared. "The fight for national representation in the District of Columbia must be carried on and leaders must be trained to continue the work which has already been begun. It remains for you junior citizens, the civic leaders of tomorrow, to see that enthusiasm for this truly American principle does not wane."

Fire Chief George S. Watson, as a guest, made a short talk on the work of the local fire department. Capt. H. W. Chapman, of Engine Company No. 18, demonstrated the operation of modern fire boxes. After the meeting Chief Watson remained to chat with members on topics of current interest.

NEW WATER RATES BECOME EFFECTIVE

INCREASE 36 PER CENT

New water rates, authorized in the appropriation act for the current fiscal year, were put into effect yesterday by the District Commissioners.

The minimum charge per year was set at $8.75. This entitles the consumer to 7,500 cubic feet of water per year. Consumption in excess of that amount will be charged for at the rate of 7 cents per 100 cubic feet instead of the 6 cents heretofore charged. The old minimum charge was $6.36 per year.

Rates for water which is not metered are based on the size of the building and the number of front feet of the lot. Tenements two stories or less with a frontage of 16 feet or less will be assessed $9.85 a year, with an additional charge of 62 cents for each additional front foot or fraction thereof, while for each additional story or fraction thereof the basic charge will be increased by one-third.

Water supplied for building operations, but not metered, will be charged for at the rate of 6 cents per 100 brick and 3 cents per cubic yard of concrete, with a minimum charge of $1 per building.

Charge for connecting houses with the water system was increased from $2 to $3 per front foot.

The water rates, on the whole, were increased by about 36 per cent, and the rates for metered commercial service were increased about proportionately with those fixed for domestic consumers. The water service charges are payable in advance each year.

Embezzlement Charge Laid Against Driver

Charles Goodman, 30 years old, a driver for the Carpel Co., food wholesalers, was arrested yesterday on six charges of embezzlement by Detectives J. F. Flaherty and W. J. Dubusky. He is alleged to have collected about $65 from six patrons of the company and failed to turn in the amounts to his employers.

According to the police, Goodman is declared to have admitted the peculations and to have declared he used the money to buy necessities. He is married and has one child, police say, but has not lived with his family recently.

Child May Recover After 30-Foot Fall

Danny Oliff Plunges From Window to Concrete Driveway Below.

Danny was playing in a room with two aunts, Miss Ida Oliff and Miss Thelma Oliff, his relatives said, when in some way he unhooked a window screen and plunged out, falling 30 feet to a concrete driveway before his aunts realized what had happened.

The boy was rushed to Sibley Hospital in an auotmobile by a neighbor, and treated by Dr. L. O. Fox, who reported that Danny had a large bruise on his forehead, cut lips, and a possible fracture of the right arm. Danny never lost consciousness, though, and is expected to recover, Dr. Fox said.

DR. TINDALL FETED ON 62-YEAR RECORD

Retirement Act Waived by Congress for District Employe, Aged 85.

CAPPER, OTHERS SPEAK

Dr. William Tindall, 85-year-old veteran of 62 years' service in the District government, yesterday stilled the tribute of District officials and employes to liken himself to the grenadier of Napoleon's wars, who told the emperor that he had lived through the many campaigns.

"That's all I've done. Just lasted through," said the doctor, deprecating the praise which had been given him by Senator Arthur Capper (Republican), of Kansas, chairman of the Senate District committee; the District Commissioners and others. The occasion was a reception tendered in the board room in the District Building, celebrating the fact that Congress, in the appropriation act for the current year, had waived the automatic retirement provisions of the law so far as Dr. Tindall was concerned and given him a lifetime tenure of his job as chief of the bureau of information of the District government.

Precedent Is Established.

"There was only one argument which I had to confront when the legislation was pending and that was that it would set a precedent," Senator Capper told the gathering which filled the board room and overflowed into the corridor. "My answer to that was that we ought to be glad, and I, for one, would be glad to follow this precedent whenever I found a man who has passed 62 years in the public service who is still active physically and mentally and still going strong."

Dr. Tindall was given an ovation when he was escorted into the palm-decorated boardroom between Clifford Lanham, superintendent of trees and parkings, and Dr. William C. Fowler, health officer, both of whom are old friends. William P. Richards, assessor, presented Dr. Tindall with a horseshoe of flowers as tall as the recipient and with a beautifully wrought desk set. Dr. Luther H. Richelderfer, president of the Board of Commissioners, presided, and he and Col. William B. Ladue, Engineer Commissioner, and Gen. Herbert B. Crosby posed for photographers beside Dr. Tindall, while the crowded boardroom seemed filled with the air of a happy celebration. And none was more pleased than Francis Wells, colored clerk, who fathered the idea of the tribute to the "grand old man" of the District service.

Dr. Tindall Excited.

That it was more than an ordinary occasion to Dr. Tindall, too, was indicated by the fact that later in the day his usually carefully combed hair was a bit mussed, what with answering congratulations and marks of esteem and preparing to attend a gathering at the Cosmos Club last night.

The day was brought to an official end when the District Commissioners adopted a formal order continuing Dr. Tindall in the District service indefinitely beyond the date which had been fixed for his retirement.

POLICEMAN FACING OFFICIAL TRIAL FOR DISCOURTEOUS ACT

PATROLMAN ORDERED TO ANOTHER PRECINCT

B. R. Torrence Disabled Car and "Jerked" Driver Out of Phone Booth.

Instructions that members of the Police Department are to do their duty impersonally and treat citizens with courtesy even when they arrest them are more than empty words, Maj. Henry G. Pratt, superintendent of police, demonstrated yesterday.

Policeman B. R. Torrence, of the Eighth Precinct, was accused by Benjamin Shapiro of disabling his automobile and "jerking" him out of a telephone booth when Mr. Shapiro was about to telephone police about the matter. The policeman charged Mr. Shapiro with parking his machine so that it obstructed a crosswalk, parking more than six inches from the curb and failing to change the address on his operator's permit. Judge Gus Schuldt dismissed the charges when the policeman admitted taking the distributor cap from Mr. Shapiro's machine.

Policeman's Transfer Ordered.

Maj. Pratt immediately ordered Torrence transferred to the Fourth Precinct, and in a second order called for an investigation of the incident looking to disciplinary action against the policeman before the Police Trial Board.

Torrence apparently is destined to go before the trial board for disciplinary action whether Mr. Shapiro makes formal complaint against him or not. He did not do so yesterday. If he does the policeman will be tried on the basis of that complaint. Otherwise Maj. Pratt will prefer charges of unbecoming conduct against the officer.

"Tough" Treatment to Cease.

Washington's Police Force, Maj. Pratt has decreed, is going to be a courteous one, and "tough" handling of citizens will cease.

In this program he has the full backing of Commissioner Herbert B. Crosby, who believes that hard-boiled tactics toward citizens not only brings the Police Department into disrepute, but alienates from it that public sympathy and support which is vital to proper policing of a large city.

Lansburgh Employes To Hold Outing Today

Employes of Lansburgh & Brother, through their Mutual Relief Association, will hold their twelfth annual picnic at Chapel Point, Md., today, with the trip to be made on the steamer City of Washington, leaving the Seventh Street Wharf at 9 o'clock this morning. An elaborate program has been arranged, following luncheon on the boat before its arrival at Chapel Point, where numerous entertainment features have been scheduled.

The committee of the association is headed by Thomas H. Mullenberg, president of the employes, with Miss D. Pratt, as chairman of the grounds; Gilbert Bogan, in charge of games; H. Darby, for refreshments; S. Hall, for tickets; C. Hamm, for prizes; A. Staley, for publicity; A. Shortt, for transportation, and M. Kahn, for entertainment.

Capital Woman Named Beneficiary Under Will

Mrs. George E. Pruett, wife of George E. Pruett, a brick contractor, of 2912 N street northwest, is named as beneficiary of the residuary estate of her late cousin, Miss May A. Troxell, until her death on June 13, a resident of 2929 N street northwest, in the latter's will filed yesterday for probate in Kings County surrogate's court in New York.

The estate is valued at "more than $10,000," according to the petition for probate. Mrs. Pruett also is named executrix of the estate. Mrs. Kate Ourdan, also a cousin of Miss Troxell, who lives with her, receives $100 under the terms of the will.

Man Has New Car Tags, But No Auto for Them

Leo Riscassi, an employe of the Senate Office Building, has a nice new set of automobile tags today, but he has no automobile for them to adorn.

He had a car on Thursday, a wonderfully shiny new coupe, which he had just purchased, but when he arose bright and early yesterday morning to put the new plates on the new car, he discovered that thieves had driven away in his car, entirely undismayed by its lack of license. Police are still seeking the machine.

Legion Post of Bureau Plans Orphans' Outing

The Bureau of Engraving and Printing Post, No. 23, of the American Legion, will hold an orphans' outing at Marshall Hall today. The post will have as guests 150 children from Washington orphanages, including a large number of children of needy former service men who are under the direct care of the welfare officer of the District department of the legion.

A program of races, athletic contests and entertainment is scheduled for the children, while a popularity contest is slated for the young women of the bureau who attend.

Two Given Sentences On Liquor Charges

May Spicer, of New York avenue, near First street northwest, and John H. Schrader drew 45 days in jail on each of four liquor charges in Police Court yesterday. Judge Isaac R. Hitt said that he would allow the sentences to run concurrently.

The two arrests were made by Sergt. John Leach, successor to Oscar J. Letterman on the vice squad.

A CORRECTION

The Post inaccurately stated on June 21 that W. D. Davis, former Traffic Bureau policeman, had been indicted for robbery growing out of charges made by Mrs. Marion P. Jacobs on February 10. The story should have said that he was merely held for the grand jury.

The charge against Mr. Davis was ignored by the grand jury on June 20 after some investigation.

Daily O'Currences

By JOHN DALY

"GOOD MORNIN' my love," I greeted Luella, the age-old salutation Adam used to Eve, resplendent after a good night's sleep; Luella, not Eve. In the Latin, of course, it was Bene Morning-glorium; or, Good Morning, Glory.

"That reminds me," mumbled Luella, sweeping past the breakfast nook. Instead of returning the greeting she sashayed out into the garden. I thought probably she was going to get me a boutonniere.

In a little while Luella returned.

"Who're there? What's there?"

"The mourning doves——"

"Don't I know it? They had me awake at dawn——"

Luella smiled: "I don't mean the ones you mean."

"Who, Frankie and Johnnie? Or, rather," I apologized, remembering she'd named them after the Lindberghs, "Charles Augustus and Anne?"

* * * * *

THERE were others: "What'dye mean? You don't mean the ones I mean?"

"I mean the newcomers," said Luella, the pride of discovery in her eyes.

Luella was in high joy: "They're the cutest little things——"

"They can't be so cute, with voices like fog-horns. The call of the mourning dove sounds to me like the nightmare——"

Luella grew angry. "Honestly," she said, "sometimes I think you haven't a spark of poetry in your soul——"

* * * * *

ALWAYS it's poetry and romance with Luella. That stuff's all right in the books, but out here in this hard, cold old world, men of business know better, and I told her so.

"You call yourself a business man?" she queried, and added, "No wonder business has gone to——"

"Luella! You mustn't talk like that. Suppose the mourning doves should hear you."

It brought her to her senses. "I'm glad you have some consideration for the birds," she said. "If you could only see the babies——"

"The babies?"

"The baby birds."

"There are baby birds, eh? Mourning doveletz?"

"We've got a pair——"

"Is that so! Well, well, well! What a great help they'll be when they grow up. More noise!"

"It's a pigeon pair," she exulted.

"A pigeon pair? Thought you just said they were mourning doves——"

"You know what I mean—a boy and a girl."
